LLOYD GEORGE FORCED TO QUIT

London, Oct. 19.—Premier Lloyd George presented the resignations of himself and all other members of his Cabinet to King George at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. The resignations were accepted by the King, it was officially announced at 6 p. m. The Premiership has been offered to A. Bonar Law, a Unionist. Lloyd George's resignation is not effective until Mr. Law accepts.

The resignations followed the vote, earlier in the day, of the Conservatives to withdraw from the Coalition government of which the Welsh statesman has been the head since 1916. The desertion by the Tories was due to the Near-East war cloud.

Premier Lloyd George was the last of the conspicuous leaders of the World War to go down.

HALL DIARY BARES 'FIRE OF LOVE'

Slain Rector Describes Yearning for Choir Singer While Away on Lonely Vacation

New York, Oct. 19.—How "all the universe of love" was "crushed into my love for you" was written into the remarkable love-diary of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall. Failure to receive mail from his beloved choir singer, with whom he was murdered, filled him with such morbid impatience that he whote as though in a fever. His "days were years long."

A second compelling installment of the Rev. Mr. Hall's Love-Diary is herewith presented exclusively in the American. Analysis of the man's thoughts while vacationing in Maine with his wife, evidently against his inclinations, indicate his mental anxiety and longing when away from Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills:

Monday, Aug. 7.—Another day of fog dear heart, so foggy and disagreeable that all this morning I stayed indoors and read most of the time—I am reading three books—the Outline of Science, which I spoke to you about—the Story of Mankind (history)—and the 'Life of the Spirit and the Life of Today'—a book I found in Boston and a book you will love, but rather theological—but it is just the Life of the Spirit that we understand—I want to discuss every page with you—in the afternoon I played on the organ down stairs—like the organ in the Guild room—today I am hoping that you received my card telling of the safe arrival of your letter—you must never be without messages from me and I will write as often as seems wise—good night blessed heart of mine—I am getting to bed early and hoping for good weather tomorrow so I can go to Seal Harbor—

Tuesday, Aug. 8.—Fog and rain in the morning—but I went to

116 SAVED IN FIRE ON SHIP

Providence Boat Makes Port, Still Ablaze; Passengers Are Rescued at Sea

Colonial line steamer Concord, New York to Providence, minus her 116 passengers, and with a fire still smouldering on her freight deck, pulled into Providence today.

At 2 a. m., twelve miles off Watch Hill, a fire broke out on the freight deck. It spread rapidly before it was discovered. Captain George Webb of Staunton, skipper, summoned the stewards and instructed them to rouse all the passengers. While they were doing this he ordered the radio operator to send out an S. O. S. call.

The passengers were awakened and dressed without panic. Discipline was admirably maintained. Some of the men even offered to help the crew fight the fire, which was blazing merrily, fed by freight boxes.

The distress call was picked up by the Providence line freighter Mohegan, who was a mile astern. She pulled up and the 116 passengers of the Concord were transferred.

Half an hour later the fire was under control and the Concord was proceeding on her own steam to Providence.

No one was injured. The transfer of passengers was done with the wind blowing at between twenty-five and thirty miles an hour from the northwest. There was a little swell on but not enough to require the use of a gang plank in transferring the passengers, among them were Louis Wiersia and wife and seven children from Whittneville, Mass.

Captain George P. Cobb of the Concord and his officers were praised for the control of the situation.

Passengers reported that five negro porters and stokers were first to don life preservers and that these men were discharged by Captain Cobb. He reported that the men had deserted the ship.

Officials of the Colonial line could not estimate the amount of damage to the cargo, which consisted of silk, tobacco and general merchandise. They said it was little.

In British Crisis

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE

And, in centre, A. Bonar Law, who has been offered Premiership. At bottom, Lord Derby, also named for office which Law may decline, as he did once before.

After the Tory conference today the Cabinet hastily met at No. 10 Downing street, where about half a dozen under secretaries and ministers—all members of the Unionist party—handed in their resignations.

The general resignation was drawn up and signed, and shortly after 4 o'clock Lloyd George started to hold an historic interview with King George.

The Premier was in a good humor. He showed no anxiety over his political fate. He smiled and waved his cane and bowed when crowds acclaimed him in the streets.

At Buckingham Palace he greeted friends with cordial handshakes. Many times he had visited the palace to confer on affairs of State and on great international problems.

What thoughts filled his mind this evening as he realized that this was his last "official" call, can only be guessed.

The King was absent when the political crisis reached its climax, but hastened back to London from Sandringham, where he was on vacation.

BONAR LAW NOTIFIED.

Word was conveyed to Andrew Bonar Law, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, to hold himself in readiness to be summoned to the palace.

This indicated that Mr. Law was to be Mr. Lloyd George's successor, for in the meantime it was announced from semi-official sources that Sir Robert Horne, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Earl Balfour and Austen Chamberlain—all Unionists—had retired from their government posts.

The conference of Mr. Lloyd George and King George was brief.

Still smiling breezily the Welsh statesman returned from Buckingham Palace to Downing street, where a delegation of miners was awaiting him.

"Gentlemen, I have the privilege to tell you that I am no longer Premier," said Mr. Lloyd George.

"I have resigned to the King and he has accepted."

The resignation of the other members of the government were accepted by the King at the same time.

Lloyd George told his friends he was tired and wanted a rest. War has been averted in the Near East and the Irish problem is out of the way and Mr. Lloyd George believes that the next Premier will find it an easier job in the future than it has been in the past. The biggest problems are taxation, meeting the American debt and German indemnity.

IN PARLIAMENT 32 YEARS.

David Lloyd George is fifty-nine years of age and has been a member of Parliament for thirty-two years. In May, 1915, he was appointed Minister of Munitions, becoming Premier the following year. As head of the Board of Trade Mr. Lloyd George made such a reputation as to attract national attention. Then he was made Chancellor of the Exchequer. He was Chief of the British delegation at the Paris Peace Conference. Also he headed the English delegation which made peace with the Irish Sinn Feiners.

Throughout his long career in public life he rejected all offers of royal honors. He could have had a high title but he turned it down on the ground it would not be fitting

How Tories Broke Away From the Coalition

London, Oct. 19 (By the Associated Press).—The Lloyd George coalition received its death blow at the hands of the Conservative party, when the Conservative members of the House of Commons and government ministers at their meeting in the Carlton Club ... peal to the country as the Conservative party.

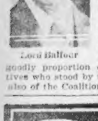
This creates a situation of the greatest political confusion and uncertainty the country has known for many years.

The Conservative leader expected to be picked for premier is either Andrew Bonar Law or the Earl of Derby.

The life of the new Conservative Ministry will probably be very brief, according to present forecasts, and a general election is expected swiftly to follow its formation.

The party lines upon which the election will be fought present a profound puzzle.

One suggestion is that Mr. Lloyd George may form a Centre party in which he could count upon Austen Chamberlain and Lord Birkenhead, and perhaps Lord Balfour, the three Cabinet members whose adherence to him has been republished by today's conference.



Lord Balfour

This new party, it is suggested, would probably command the support of a goodly proportion of the Conservatives who stood by the Coalition, and also of the Coalition Liberals

Lord Birkenhead

This formation might put the Labor Party in the position of the chief opposition party.

The possibility that Mr. Lloyd George will try to return to the leadership of the Liberals is not to be overlooked, either.

Mr. Bonar Law's friends question whether his health will permit him to take office, even for a short time.

Lord Derby seems the most probable alternative selection for Prime Minister although it is suggested that Lord Curzon, who gained greatly in prestige by his work in the recent Near East negotiations and is believed to have been a lukewarm Coalitionist, might be summoned to form a government.

VICTORY FOR "DIE HARDS."

Today's vote, it is forecast, will be proclaimed as a great victory by the "die hards" group of Conservatives in Parliament, who for several months past have been advocating the withdrawal of the party from the Coalition and its resumption on its normal party organization.

There were some heated scenes inside the Carlton Club, because, although the Carlton is the headquarters of the Conservative party, only those Conservative members of the House of Commons who had supported the Coalition, together with the members of the House of Lords who are members of the Cabinet, were invited to today's meeting.

With several members of the House of Commons, not Coalitionists, however, Lord Chaplin was barred from going upstairs in the clubhouse to the chamber where the meeting was being held. Two or three of those excluded protested belligerently

The vote of the Conservatives at the Carlton Club was taken on a motion by Colonel Pretyman, Unionist member for the Chelmsford Division of Essex, which read:

TORY RESOLUTION.

"Resolved, That this meeting of Conservative members of the House of Commons declares its opinion that the Conservative party, while willing to co-operate with the Coalition Liberals, should fight the election as an independent party, with its own leader and its own program."

Austen Chamberlain, the government leader in the House, addressed the meeting first.

Austen Chamberlain

He spoke strongly along the lines of his recent Birmingham speech, appealing for the unity of the party, to be supported along the lines of the policy suggested by its leaders.

Stanley Baldwin, president of the Board of Trade, who leads the Conservative members of the Cabinet opposing Mr. Chamberlain, and Colonel Pretyman opposed the continuance of the coalition. They suggested a decision should be postponed until the meeting of the Unionist Association. Sir Henry Craig, Scotch Unionist, also opposed an immediate decision in support of the coalition.

One of those who attended the meeting said that Mr. Chamberlain was given a patient hearing, but that his point of view was plainly unpopular.

Lord Balfour spoke in support of the government leader.

BONAR LAW'S SPEECH.

Mr. Bonar Law's plea for preventing the breaking up of the party is said to have made a profound impression.

"Mr. Chamberlain says the best way to defeat the Labor menace is to continue the coalition with the Liberals," he is quoted as having said. "I say the best way is to maintain the party absolutely independent and you will defeat the Labor menace in the end. Otherwise you will split your party, just as the Liberals are split."

Several of the Unionist junior members resigned from the Cabinet immediately after the Union st meeting. These include Stanley Baldwin, president of the Board of Trade; Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen, Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries; Lieutenant-Colonel L. C. M. S. Amery, parliamentary and financial secretary to the Admiralty; Sir Philip Lloyd-Greame, Minister of Overseas Trade; Sir John Baird, under-secretary of state for the Home Office, and Colonel Leslie Wilson, joint parliamentary secretary to the treasury and chief Unionist whip. Captain H. D. King, another of the Unionist whips, and Colonel Albert Buckley, assistant Unionist whip, also resigned.

Two events of yesterday are considered to have contributed largely to today's decision. One was the result of the Newport election, which in so far as it was any test, confirmed the belief of the "Die Hards" that the Conservatives, going into the election as a party, could sweep the country.

The second was the decision of the committee of the Unionist organization to hold an emergency meeting to consider the course of the party, because of the feeling that today's caucus, composed solely of the Coalition members of the party in the House of Commons with such of the members of the House of Lords as were Cabinet members, had no right to assume to decide the future for the whole party.

If the Conservatives control the next Parliament they may be depended upon, it is considered, to carry out the treaty made with Ireland by the Lloyd George government. That this would be done was stated by the Marquis of Salisbury in his speech last Monday.

The general results of today's collapse of the coalition promises to be, after a period of upheaval the length of which is difficult to predict, the reversion of Great Britain to the traditional system of government on strict party lines.

British Plan to Pay Debt to U. S. Unchanged

London, Oct. 19 (By International News Service).—A change of government in Great Britain will not alter the British policy of paying the $4,277,000,000 which the British owe the United States it was officially announced at the Treasury Department today.

A plan for payment of the debt and interest thereon already has been worked out and is ready for presentation to the American government by the British debt funding commission, headed by Sir Robert Horne, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Departure of this commission has been delayed pending settlement of the British political crisis. The personnel of the commission may be changed as a result of the Tory "uprising" against the Lloyd George coalition government.

Shade of Northcliffe Is Grinning as Lloyd George Goes Down

"Somewhere" in the satisfying Heaven pictured by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle the shade of Lord Northcliffe smiles grimly today.

David Lloyd George, whom Northcliffe made Premier and then tried to unmake, is a fallen dictator.

The saying that "everything comes to him who waits" might have been true for Northcliffe could he have waited on earth. But death bade the great British publisher journey on, while his enemy still remained in power.

But now, as the spirit of Northcliffe looks down over England, as Conan Doyle would have us believe, it must be filled with a very material satisfaction at the political disaster to the man he lifted up, then sought to cast down.

ASQUITH PLEASED.

But the satisfaction denied on earth to Northcliffe comes sweetly to Herbert Asquith, who was supplanted as Premier in the War crisis of 1916. Asquith sees with living eyes the collapse of Lloyd George's Coalition government.

The same London dispatches which foretell the resignation of Lloyd George say that the Conservative leader picked to form a new government will be A. Bonar Law, or maybe the Earl of Derby.

Bonar Law, in fact, might have been the Lloyd George of the 1916 crisis if he had possessed the indomitable will—or the "nerve" as we say on this side of the Atlantic—which made the "Little Welshman" the man he was.

BONAR LAW DECLINED.

When the Asquith Ministry was forced out by the Northcliffe press and the failure of British war efforts, the Premiership was first offered Bonar Law. But he declined. It was too ticklish a job. Lloyd George took it over and the world knows what he did.

CAUSE OF COLLAPSE.

The collapse of the Lloyd George government is result of a bad guess by a man who was greatest guesser of modern British politics.

For his uncanny forecast in picking what the public wanted, in following the public's pulse, he earned the name of "Nimble-Wit." The term was used with admiration by his supporters; with scorn by his foes.

But on the Turko-Armenian question Lloyd George guessed wrong. England is sick of war. For once the nimbleness of wit was not quite nimble enough.

STARTS PUBLIC CAREER.

This Welshman of spectacular career began public life with election to the British Parliament in 1890. As a Liberal he left the fight of 1905 which overthrew the Unionist government.

Campbell-Bannerman made him president of the board of trade in the new Cabinet. In 1909, when the Asquith Cabinet was organized, he became Chancellor of the Exchequer.

From then until the outbreak of the World War Lloyd George jammed a reluctant Parliament with a series of tax laws and other social reforms that made him the best-loved and best-hated man in England.

His measures struck at the heart of English landed aristocracy and were denounced as revolutionary by the barons of finance.

In the Spring of 1915 Northcliffe pierced the veil of British censorship and showed that the Asquith government and the War Office were not putting the "punch" into the war that was needed.

KITCHENER ATTACKED.

Northcliffe attacked the Kitchener policies as Secretary of State for war. He roused the public. A new post, Minister of Munitions, was created to administer the needed "punch." Lloyd George was given the job and he delivered the necessary speed and energy. Field Marshal French began to get the heavy ammunition that he needed.

But Northcliffe kept hammering at the government for concealing dismal war facts from the people. In 1916 Asquith resigned. Through Northcliffe's efforts Lloyd George was made Premier. He immediately organized a strong war Cabinet, with all political factions represented.

NORTHCLIFFE TURNS.

After the armistice was signed Northcliffe, to show his political independence, turned against Lloyd George as fiercely as he had previously fought for him.

He assailed the Premier in regard to treaty questions. In a speech in the House of Commons the Premier struck back with bitter phrases.

In 1920 the British political situation became so acute that rumors spread that Lloyd George might resign and Northcliffe get the big portfolio. But the Welshman was not resigning just then.

Bonar Law Famous for Huge War Budgets

Andrew Bonar Law has for more than twenty years exerted a powerful influence in British politics.

As Chancellor of the Exchequer and one of the five members of the Lloyd George coalition government during the war, the House of Commons on two occasions voted him budgets of $3,500,000,000 and $3,250,000,000, the largest in the financial history of England.

A statesman with few political enemies, Bonar Law's career was singular. He did not enter politics until he was forty-two years old. A successful Glasgow iron merchant who had been born and educated in Canada, he rose to eminence in the British Parliament began with his election in 1900 as a Unionist from the Blackfriars Division of Glasgow.

Strong for tariff reform he became noted for his clear reasoning on that subject and was soon made Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Trade.

Later he successively became leader of the Unionist, or Opposition, party in the House of Commons, Secretary of State for the Colonies, a member of the Lloyd George Coalition War Cabinet, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and finally Lord of the Privy Seal. He retired in 1921.

Lord Derby Has Long Wanted Premiership

The Earl of Derby, former Secretary for War, has long wanted to be Premier of England. He is immensely rich, with great estates near Liverpool. He is a democrat. During the World War he was the handy man of England. He succeeded Kitchener at the War Office when a great name was needed to quiet criticism. Later he became ambassador to Paris. Some time after he went to Ireland and investigated.

A group of newspapermen were entertained in the British embassy one afternoon during the peace conference. There was plenty to eat and drink on tap and a husky lonesome-man type of person was making himself generally useful urging those present to partake liberally. He was a stranger to the group and they thought him a butler, though, to tell the truth, he was rather more democratic than a butler usually is.

But it wasn't the butler. It was the Earl of Derby.

Someone in the group told Lord Derby the joke. He shouted with laughter.

Lord Curzon Dislikes Everything American

George Nathaniel Curzon, Lord Curzon, forsaken minister under Lloyd George since 1919, says the only American he ever liked was his beautiful wife, who was the daughter of Levi Z. Leiter of Washington. Her vast fortune was used by him as Viceroy of India, and he kept his post with distinguished success. Had he been poor he never could have held it; Mr. Leiter added another million to the fortune, and this Lord Curzon used in entertaining.

Lord Curzon

Curzon was created an Earl in 1911. He was also Baron Ravensdale, and in 1908 he was an Irish representative and a peer. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society. His father was Rev. Alfred Nathaniel Holden Curzon, fourth Baron Scarsdale.

When he married Mary Leiter he cut off all her connection with the country.

He would never allow his daughters to make American friends, and when Lady Irene was presented at court her father selected a date for her reception when no Americans would appear.

Mrs. Leiter finally arranged to spend six months in England each year, so that she could see her granddaughters, but as they grew up Curzon's attitude became unbearable and she died broken-hearted over this.

Lloyd George Happy in Retiring; Plans to Visit U. S.

London, Oct. 19 (By International News Service).—Premier Lloyd George, who stepped out from under the British Empire this evening, when his resignation was accepted by King George, appeared to be the happiest man in London.

A great crowd cheered him as he left Buckingham Palace, and the Premier laughed and waved his arm like a boy.

Mr. Lloyd George plans a long rest, and will do considerable writing. He has long wished to visit the United States and may do so later.

London Stock Market Unaffected by Change

London, Oct. 19.—The political crisis this afternoon had little effect on the stock exchange, where the advent of a Conservative Cabinet would undoubtedly be welcomed, as most of the members are staunchly Conservative. It is stated, in fact, that such an outcome would tend to make the market better were it not for the condition of foreign exchanges, which caused a generally easier tone today.

French Rejoice as Lloyd George Falls

Paris, Oct. 19 (By International News Service).—There were scenes of rejoicing in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon when news was received that Premier Lloyd George's resignation had been accepted.

"This is the crowning event of France's diplomatic victory on the Near East question," said one deputy.

Words followed, and Morse attacked Hammond. He complained to the management and the doorkeeper was discharged.

Later, as the party was walking on Hanover street, Morse accosted them, making threats against Hammond, who secured a warrant for his arrest.

Judge Dowd found Morse guilty of assault and battery and of making threats. He said "such things as you are very little service to a hotel or community" and imposed a four months' sentence.

Two weeks ago we learned of the endeavor being made to take a number of orphans (about 250) living in the numerous welfare homes of Boston to see the wonderful picture play, "Forget-Me-Not."

We were requested to supply transportation.

250 seemed a large number in view of the present scarcity of Nash cars.

Yet we wanted to do our part in such a worthy endeavor—and we accepted the responsibility.

During the week we carried not 250, but over 750, and we enjoyed doing it.

Brand new Nash cars had to be requisitioned even from the freight. Nash owners responded enthusiastically to help us meet the emergency.

The knowledge that we have helped to bring a little sunshine to these young lives has made our task enjoyable and more than worth while.

Bernhardt's Granddchild Europe's New Deal Music for the Insane Savings and Prohibition

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922 Star Co.

Sarah Bernhardt will appear in a play written by her granddaughter. That tells the story of Bernhardt's energy. She is coming again to America, by the way.

The mother of that Bernhardt granddaughter is the Princess Jablonoska, who studied at Julien's, in Paris, with Marie Bashkireff. The princess' mother was a Polish countess; her father was the old King of Italy, created by Garibaldi. "My granddaughter possesses great talent and is an exquisite poetess," says Bernhardt. No wonder.

A new line in Europe, with France the friend of Turkey, Poland and Russia, against England. The next step, naturally, will be a British step toward Germany, Austria and Italy. Then Europe will be all ready for a new start and a new war. Russia, as usual, will be the uncertainty—she reserves the right to change her mind and change sides at any moment. That is the revolutionary method.

A while ago war ended with France and England in each other's arms, vowing eternal friendship, Italy disgusted, as she well might be, with her Allies' treatment. Germany and Austria nowhere, Russia boycotted by all, and Turkey apparently a thing of the past.

Then France sent weapons and money to the Turks to fight the Greeks, back came Turkey, with the Allies bowing and yielding politely to the "unspeakable" one. And now everything is changed.

Just one lesson for Uncle Sam in all that. Let him attend to his own business, keep away from Europe's complications, and let our friends over there fight and borrow from EACH OTHER.

Dr. Heyman, head of Blackwell's Island Insane Asylum in New York, invites artists to sing to 600 unfortunates under his care. Those hopelessly insane stare and mumble. But the others are deeply moved. Many weep as the music clears the mist from memory, others smile happily, the mania that weighs upon them being lightened. And ALL are benefited, made happier.

The old way was to chain maniacs to the stone floor, and "calm them" with cruel, prolonged showers of ice cold water. From believing the insane body inhabited by a vicious devil, that must be driven out by human devilry, to Dr. Heyman's music treatment is progress.

In savings banks, prohibitionists have an argument hard to answer—if you take savings bank statistics as final. In the year past deposits have increased $88,499,000, and depositors have increased by 764,035. There are now $3,046,054,000 in savings bank accounts and 3,373,227 depositors.

Encouraging figures, but those opposed to prohibition may say there are things more important to progress than dollars put

TWO GIRLS WENT ON VAMPING TOURS

Eleanor Barnes Tells How She and Blanche Paul "Worked" Country

By ERNEST T. JENKINS.

Hartford, Ct., Oct. 19.—Eleanor Barnes, siren de luxe of the Boston blackmail ring, who worked with Blanche Paul to lure business men into compromising situations so that unscrupulous attorneys could demand a price for silence, today told the Boston American the full story of her wanderings since she left Boston.

In company with the Paul woman she roamed about New England for a time and then went west, where certain of Henry Ford's employes were left poorer after the departure of Boston's hired vampires.

During their wanderings the lessons the two women had learned while under the tutelage of the Boston lawyers stood them in good stead and kept them well supplied with money.

"WORKED" NEW HAMPSHIRE.

"We left Boston for New Hampshire, where we remained several days," she said. "We met a lot of good fellows in Concord, Manchester, Derry and other places, and we sure staged some parties. This Paul woman, who says I ruined her, was the leader. And every man she met she got money from.

"She threatened a wealthy man in Manchester. But he finally refused to be a sucker any longer, and quit her. She tried to force him to marry her. Ask her what she did to Jess of Concord, and Arthur and Frank. She tried the same stunt on them.

"From New Hampshire we went to Springfield, Worcester and other Massachusetts cities, and then to Detroit. Blanche bled several officials in the Ford plant.

COUNTRY CLUB PARTIES.

"Those certainly were great days in Boston. We had some great times with a banker who certainly liked his liquor. Then there was a real estate man, who lived in Newton. He was a card.

"We used to go out to the Belmont Country Club a lot. Blanches took a shine to a golf professional there, who knew her under the name of May Bell. They had many parties. As usual, Blanche wound up by threatening him. She tried the same trick on an investigator for a Boston credit association.

"Myron Grooms, my second husband, didn't marry me because he loved me. He married me while I was under the influence of liquor. When I woke up and he told me I was his wife, I screamed. I never lived with him after that.

LONGS FOR REAL HOME.

"When Blanche Paul's husband Scott was traveling around with another woman, Blanche said to me: 'If he don't cut it out I'll kill him and the girl he goes around with.'

"I married my first husband, Clarence Barton, when I was thirteen. He was fifteen. We had a baby. It died. He treated me cruelly and I ran away from home in Binghampton, N. Y., and joined a show at the Columbia Theater, New York. The manager got too fresh and so I quit. I was a good girl in those days.

"I wouldn't live my life over again for million. If I had a real home, baby and a real man for a husband, I'd be in the seventh heaven of delight. Don't forget that all of us have to pay in tears for our sins. I may have laughed, but many is the night I have sat down and cried over my wasted life. But still I wouldn't sell my experiences or go through with them again. It doesn't pay."

ARREST MADE IN CRONKHITE MURDER

rest over a year ago, that he had killed Cronkhite and the subsequent seizure of Captain Robert Rosenbluth of New York, charged with complicity in the killing.

The cases of the government against both men were later dropped on orders from Attorney-General Daugherty, who had investigated the evidence against them and pronounced it not to be of a character to warrant prosecutions.

CALLS ON ATTORNEY.

In the event that he may be named in the sealed Federal indictment filed recently in Tacoma, Wash., in connection with the death of Major Cronkhite, Robert Rosenbluth, former army captain, who has figured in the case, called with his attorney on United States Attorney Hayward in New York, for the purpose, he said, of giving the prosecuting officials his address.

Rosenbluth was referred to John E. Joyce, assistant United States attorney, in charge of the Cronkhite case, who requested him to return to the Federal courthouse today.

Rosenbluth was arrested in New York on March 26, 1921. Major Cronkhite was shot on the outskirts of the Camp Lewis military reservation.

ROSENBLUTH GAVE BAIL.

Rosenbluth, four days after his arrest, gave $25,000 bail in Liberty bonds to go to the State of Washington to answer any charges officials there might make against him. The New York authorities investigated the shooting and declined to proceed against Rosenbluth. His bail was then released and it was supposed the inquiry had ended.

POPE INFORMED OF DANGERS OF VATICAN RAID

Rome, Oct. 19 (By the Associated Press).—Gabriele D'Annunzio, the Italian soldier poet, and Benito Mussolini, the leader of the Fascisti, signed an agreement today, uniting their forces and establishing communication between the two leaders throughout Italy.

Rome, Oct. 19.—The possibility of an attack on the Vatican if the Fascisti make good their threat to march on Rome, seize the city and take over the government, was discussed by church officials today.

The attention of Pope Pius XI was called to the fact that the Vatican is defenceless and that the Swiss guards and other household troops are more for ornament than force.

The Pontiff said: "I believe that common sense will prevail. I do not believe that the Vatican is in danger now or that it will be placed in any."

Belgrade, Oct. 19 (By International News Service).—Jugo Slav Nationalists, a patriotic organization pledged to support of the government and national expansion, today were ordered to mobilize under certain noted Servian guerrilla chiefs to fight the Italian Fascisti if the latter invade the country. The Fascisti have been massing on the Dalmatian frontier and there have been several clashes between them and the Jugo Slav border guards.

ACCUSED DOCTOR FAILS TO APPEAR

Plymouth, Oct. 19.—Dr. Charles Bouin of Boston, on trial here in Superior Court, charged with illegal surgery on Olive Lyman of North Dana, failed to appear at opening of court today. The girl testified to the performing of an operation. Awaiting Bouin's possible appearance, the court took a long recess. Bouin is in $10,000 bonds.

ALLEN IS CALLED TO TESTIFY

Made Defence Witness at the Trial of Grand Jury Contempt Charges

The defense in the contempt proceedings before Judge Bishop in Superior Court today, against three officials of the Hanover Trust Company, startled the spectators by announcing they had only one witness—Attorney-General J. Weston Allen.

The Attorney-General took the stand at the request of Attorney Frederick M. K. Sheehan counsel for Henry Chmielinski, president of the Hanover, and one of the three men accused of tampering with the Special Grand Jury which considered the Hanover and other cases.

Previous to taking the stand, the Attorney General had been asked two questions by William G. Thompson, attorney for former Congressman William S. McNary, treasurer of the Hanover. He had declined to answer them. Then Attorney Sheehan called him to the stand and asked the same questions.

"Is it true," demanded Attorney Sheehan, "that in May, 1921, in company with former Attorney-General Herbert Parker you visited the office of the district attorney and arranged for your appearance before a Grand Jury which was considering a charge of larceny against you?"

HURWITZ OBJECTS.

Assistant District Attorney Hurwitz objected to the question. Judge Bishop ruled that the Attorney-General did not have to answer it. Attorney Sheehan then asked:

"Is it true that on September 7, in a speech at Faneuil Hall, you said that two grand juries considering the case of the Hanover Trust Company had returned no bills?"

Mr. Allen, after Mr. Hurwitz's objection to this question had been overruled, admitted that this was true.

Mr. Sheehan argued that his client, Mr. Chmielinski, had done no more by writing to the Grand Jury than Attorney-General Allen had done by asking to appear before the grand jury considering his case. He demanded to know whether a privilege accorded the State's chief prosecutor should be denied to a citizen.

Contradiction of the testimony of John J. Reidy of Brookline was a feature at the contempt proceedings.

In summing up, Attorney Thompson, counsel for Mr. Chmielinski, said:

"The claims and position of Attorney-General Allen in this case are preposterous. There is nothing in common practice which prohibits any of the acts alleged to have been committed by any of the defendants in these proceedings, and nobody know this better than the Attorney-General.

"It is not only the privilege, but the duty of a person whose case is being investigated by a Grand Jury to ascertain who the witnesses are and there is no law or code of ethics to prevent a juror from telling him. A man under the possibility of indictment who does not learn who the witnesses in his case are is nothing more nor less than a simple fool."

The man who gave Mr. Reidy the tip was State Officer Frank E. Hale, attached to Attorney-General Allen's staff.

The State rested its case today. Attorney William G. Thompson, counsel for William S. McNary, offered several motions, mainly for the exclusion of certain evidence introduced. Judge Bishop declined to act on the motions.

"I think there is something far

HER LOVE GREW COLD BUT SHE KEPT RING

MISS CATHERINE LANG

Roxbury girl's answer to jilted suitor's suit for return of a $400 ring states that she broke the engagement because "her love had grown cold." She denies that she accepted the ring as symbolical of their engagement.

GIRL DENIES SHE PROMISED TO MARRY

"My love for him has grown cold."

This is the reason given by Miss Catherine Lang of Roxbury for breaking her engagement to William E. Macnaughton of No. 11 Parker street, Everett, who is suing her for the return of a $400 diamond ring.

Macnaughton was granted an injunction by the court restraining Miss Lang from disposing of the ring pending a decision after the hearing set for next week.

In her declaration were also included answers to the points brought out by Macnaughton's original bill of complaint. They were in effect: That it was true that she had been engaged to marry Macnaughton; that she was ignorant of the filing of marriage intentions, and that she did not accept the ring as an engagement ring.

Macnaughton insists that the ring was symbolical of her promise to marry him and that she was dissuaded by her family, who had found a wealthier suitor.

The couple became engaged in August, 1919, according to Macnaughton, who purchased the ring shortly afterwards. Several months ago, he says, he noticed a sudden chill in her affections.

Then came the warning of her parents, telling him to keep away from Catherine. Macnaughton ignored the warning and Mr. Lang ordered the engagement broken.

Macnaughton says that she did not jilt him for another, but attributes her act to fickleness.

MYSTERY MAN SAYS HALL SLEW SINGER

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 19.—Ellis H. Parker, Burlington County detective, today made public an unsigned communication, mailed from Philadelphia, purporting to solve the Hall-Mills case as one of murder and suicide. Whether it was written by a crank or by some one seeking to divert suspicion from the slayer, is not known.

The text follows:

"One afternoon, about three weeks ago, I lay down in the grass on the Phillips farm and fell asleep about dusk. I was awakened by loud voices scolding. Looking up, I saw not far from me a man and woman. He was sitting close to a tree and was cutting the bark. She was nearby, sorting letters.

"She asked him to keep his promise. He told her he had made none. He took the letters and threw them away and was going to leave her. She grabbed him by his coat and tore it. He bound her at the first. She pulled his hair and scratched his face. He stabbed her with his knife and she cried and told him she would tell his wife and get him arrested. Then he shot her in the face. She screamed loud and long. Then he shot her more, two or three times.

"Then he saw me. He looked awful and then he shot himself. After a time I went over to offer help, but they were dead. I straightened them out and their clothes. I saw a card with the letters near his feet. I have been sick since that day, but told no one. When she fell he knelt on her and cut her throat."

CONFIRM TESTS BY AMERICAN

Lad Recognizes Place Where He Was "Farmed Out" as State Child

Identification by the Boston American yesterday of the "gypsy" lad claimed by two women, as Robert Beade, the illegitimate son of Mrs. Eugene Choquette, was confirmed today by a statement from T. A. Lothrop, general secretary of the M. S. P. C. C.

The identification made by the American by means of an examination of the lad's eyes, was backed by Mrs. Anna Sunderland of No. 55 Lumber street, Athol, and Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Mayo, No. 259 Mt. Auburn street, Watertown, who recognized the boy and were recognized by him.

PROVED BY ANSWERS.

Robert, who is also claimed by Mrs. Clarence E. Smith of Dighton, was "farmed out" to Mrs. Sunderland by the State as a dependent child. She came to Boston at the request of Mr. Lothrop.

When the child appeared, the recognition was mutual, according to Mr. Lothrop. Mrs. Sunderland questioned the boy on incidents of his stay with her, which lasted from October 4 to December 24, 1920. The replies of the child definitely established his identity.

Robert was then taken to Mrs. Mayo's home. At first he refused to admit he recognized the place, but he finally indicated the room in which he had slept. This tallied with the story of Mrs. Mayo, in whose home Robert's mother was for a time a domestic.

MAINE EVIDENCE.

Details of the identification were forwarded to John H. Hallahan, agent for the society, who will turn them over to the Taunton police. Mr. Lothrop said Mr. Hallahan would have some interesting evidence from Maine next Monday when the case of Eugene Choquette, who is charged with kidnaping the child, comes up for trial.

RICH MAN'S HOUSE RANSACKED IN LYNN

Burglars early today broke into the home of Ira J. Haskell, wealthy lumberman, on Currier road, in Lynn's fashionable "Diamond District" and got away with a sum of money and numerous trinkets belonging to Mrs. Currier. Entrance was gained by jimmying a kitchen window. Mr. and Mrs. Haskell and their two children slept while the robbers ransacked the entire house. It is believed to be the same gang which has terrorized this district during the past two weeks.

HAZARDS OF WRITER AID AUTHOR IN WILL

Chicago, Oct. 19.—The hazards of his profession as a writer have given to Henry Kitchell Webster, novelist, a share of his father's estate, double that of the other five sons and daughters of Towner K. Webster, whose will was admitted to probate here. Henry Kitchell Webster received $50,000, because "he is engaged in a form of occupation making his income and livelihood dependent on his present work," the will said. Each of the other children got $25,000.

STILL BLOWS UP; STARTS FIRE IN SOMERVILLE

The explosion of a still with a reported capacity of seventy-five gallons is regarded as the cause of a fire that raced through a building in the rear of No. 48 Tufts street, Somerville today.

The building is owned by Daniel Malachy and occupied by John O. Freeman, Somerville milk dealer. Part of the upper section of the barn is used as a store room, the other part is sublet by Mr. Berryman to a man known as "Mr. Smith." It was in the latter section that the still was located.

Flames had engulfed one of the milk toilers, was approaching the barn when there was an explosion, followed by a flash of flame. He sounded the alarm and firemen found the still, which had, up to a short time previous, been in full operation. No trace of the operators, however could be found.

Sergeant Howard of the Somerville police seized about twenty gallons of "rub moonshine," as the police termed it. The damage is estimated at $3,000.

GIVES LIE TO TESTIMONY IN JURY PROBE

more important involved in this case," he said, "than the rights of the defendants."

TELLS OF LETTER.

Mr. Reidy, former official of the Hanover, denied yesterday that William S. McNary, former Congressman, had told him he had written the letter signed by Walter G. Conway of New York. Conway's letter was one received by members of the Grand Jury. Mr. Allen charges the letter was an attempt to unduly influence the Grand Jury in its investigation of the Hanover Trust Company case.

Mr. Reidy admitted he had discussed Conway's letter with Mr. McNary, that the ex-Congressman had said it was a good letter, but that he had not told him he had written it.

Mr. Hale testified today concerning a conference at which he was present, when Assistant Attorney General Albert Hurwitz questioned Mr. Reidy. This occurred last Friday, he said.

"On that occasion Reidy," Mr. Hale testified, "said McNary talked with me about the Conway letter. He told me he helped Conway to draft the letter.' After he made this statement, Reidy hesitated and said I don't know whether he said he had helped Conway draft the letter, or whether he said he had just read the letter.'

"He did say that Conway had written a cork-ing letter to the grand jury and that in the letter he had shown up Hurwitz as counsel for Stiff Brothers."

HEARD IN CORRIDOR.

Mr. Hale testified that during the time Mr. Allen's special grand jury was considering the Hanover case he was in charge of witnesses in the corridor of the courtroom. He saw Charles Pratt, one of the three defendants in the contempt hearings and former manager of the North End branch of the Hanover, approach several witnesses.

"He talked with seven witnesses in the case, all of whom were formerly attached to the Hanover Trust Company," said Mr. Hale. "One of these he approached was Dr. Francis Donahue. He came up to him as Dr. Donahue was leaving the courtroom for having testified. I heard Pratt say to Dr. Donahue: 'What did they say? What did they want?' Then they put their heads together and I couldn't hear their talk.

"I saw Pratt approach Gabriel Stable, before Stable entered the jury room to testify. 'What are you up here for?' Pratt asked Stable. 'I'm here as a witness,' I heard Stable say. They then buzzed together for some time, and Stable went in to testify."

away. Time alone, about ninety years, will tell what prohibition actually means with our kind of a mixed race.

Lloyd George coins a new expression: "If you listen to the never-dos, it's never done." Every country, every big organization has its never-dos to tell why things CAN'T be done.

They're plentiful in this country, when it comes to telling why the people can't own and manage their own public monopolies, railroads, telegraph, etc.

People that fight "BIG" business, not realizing that nothing can be TOO big, if well managed, will please observe the methods of Henry Ford and the results attained.

He has cut the price of automobiles to the lowest price ever known, while paying for labor—even the commonest kind—the highest wages ever known. HOW can he do it?

Answer: He has made more than one million automobiles already this year and is now turning out 5,000 a day, at the rate of more than 1,500,000 a year. Quantity, and intelligence that makes him divide results with the public, explains his supremacy.

In French prisons only five German war prisoners are left. Except the five, all were pardoned by the French President, and the five, convicted of serious offences, have had their sentences reduced.

In American prisons are some dozens of American prisoners. The only crime charged against them was talking unpatriotically and foolishly. They did not believe in war.

What this government thinks it is doing, keeping these men and women locked up after political prisoners in other countries have been released, is not clear. One thing the government is doing is keeping alive the thing it seeks to destroy, supplying ammunition to those that call this government the most reactionary on earth.

NEW SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY EPOCH-MAKING ACHIEVEMENT

Chemists Have at Last Succeeded in Stabilizing, Concentrating and Perfecting the Carrel-Dakin Solution, the Marvelous Antiseptic Which Saved Thousands of Wounded from Amputations and Death. Can Now Be Used in the Home to Guard Humanity from Infection and Disease.

FOSSIBILITIES IN PEACE INFINITELY GREATER THAN IN THE DAYS OF WAR

Although Non-Poisonous, New Discovery Possesses Extraordinary Germicidal Power and Tremendous Healing Properties. "Most Important Discovery Since Days of Lister." Say Scientific Journals.

No advance in medical science within the century has aroused so much interest and widespread discussion among all classes of people as the announcement that, after six long years of earnest work and scientific research, chemists have at last succeeded in stabilizing the Carrel-Dakin solution.

The Carrel-Dakin solution, it will be remembered, was the marvelous antiseptic discovered by two eminent scientists of the Rockefeller Institute, of New York City, which accomplished such remarkable results in the Allied hospitals during the World War. Chemists have not only succeeded in stabilizing the Carrel-Dakin solution so that it will keep its strength almost indefinitely, but they have concentrated it as well. This means that humanity will at last receive the benefit of this epoch-making discovery and that Zonite, as the new product is called, will be in the home, in the factory and on the farm what the Carrel-Dakin solution, since its discovery, has been in hospitals and to the medical profession throughout the civilized world.

But why have chemists labored so long to discover this? And why is their success regarded as an epoch-making achievement of almost incalculable benefit to mankind?

When the great war began medical science did not have a single antiseptic which could be relied upon successfully to combat established infection. As a result hundreds of thousands of soldiers died or were maimed for life, not from their original wounds but from tetanus, blood poisoning and other forms of infection which followed. The horrors of the Allied hospitals in the early days of the war were unbelievable. A faint idea of them is contained in the fact that the sickening odor of a passing hospital train could be noticed two hundred yards from the railroad track. Imagine the living putrefaction which that train must have contained.

Surgery Revolutionized

And then came the Carrel-Dakin solution. It was given to the surgeons of the Allied armies with the modest suggestion "try it and see." The surgeons tried it and saw. They saw a miracle happen before their eyes. That miracle is summed up in the words of Madame Carrel, a war nurse and the wife of one of the discoverers of the antiseptic.

Madame Carrel said: "We take pride in the fact that no man has yet died of wound infection in our hospital. And we know now that they are—so confident of victory. The first part of it, too, is that we are turning out almost no cripples, but men who can fight and work for the fight and work for France."

Think what that statement means. The wonder of it can be better understood by recalling that the published hospital reports show that before the discovery of the Carrel-Dakin solution seventy per cent of the wounded succumbed to their injuries or were maimed for life, seventy per cent—without the antiseptic. Not one death and almost no cripples when it was used! Think of it!

There is no parallel for this in the annals of medical history. Words like "marvellous," "wonderful," "miraculous" seem trite and commonplace when speaking of this epoch-making achievement. La Nature, the well-known scientific journal of Paris, called the Carrel-Dakin solution "the greatest medical discovery since the days of Lister—or Pasteur, for that matter." A prominent writer in The World's Work, in describing what the antiseptic accomplished in the war hospitals, said that surgeons could foretell to a day when a wounded patient would recover.

Think of an antiseptic so sure, so dependable, that a surgeon facing a gaping gunshot wound in the arm or thigh, with a foot or more of mangled flesh torn away, could say with assurance the very day when the seemingly fatal wound would be healed and the patient returned to the ranks, sound in body and limb.

Results Astonishing

What a different picture this presents to the world of today—the situation in the early days of the war. At that time the medical profession had only two kinds of antiseptics to fight infection. One was that which tended to kill germs, but which destroyed the tissues and membranes like fire and so weakened the patient that it created little more germicidal power than rain. The other was that which every physician knows that although deadly to bacteria, is also deadly if almost all suffering and disease, until the discovery of the Carrel-Dakin solution surgery had nothing which afforded real protection against the ever present and most dangerous foe.

The horrible infection caused by modern gun fire set the world at work night and day to find something that would check it. Something that would really destroy germs and could also be applied with safety to the human body. The result was the Carrel-Dakin solution. Thousands suffered, thousands died, that this antiseptic might be born. It conquered infection in the war hospitals. It is the wonder of modern surgery, but what it was first given to the world the cost in human life had been completed, for the unfortunate was usually in a condition where it would not "keep." In other words, it would not "keep" day and night a great mass of humanity was deprived of its protection. This accomplishing marvels in hospital use but if the world was to profit to the utmost by the highest asset of the war it must be put directly into the hands of the people—it must go into the home.

Laboratory Tests Convincing

That is very clearly what worried chemists for six long years. The Carrel-Dakin solution must be stabilized, they said. And so they worked carefully, doggedly, failing again and again, until at last success came. It came with Zonite. It is the marvelous World War antiseptic in the form perfected so that it will keep its strength indefinitely, but concentrated to such an extent that it may be beauty that men who can fight and work for the utmost effectiveness.

The strength of Zonite have been convincingly demonstrated by some very interesting laboratory tests. The standard international method of testing an antiseptic is known as the Rideal-Walker phenol coefficient test.

The phenol coefficient of an antiseptic is a comparison of the germicidal powers with phenol, the chemical from coal tar from which carbolic acid and its standard test. The phenol coefficient of Zonite is normally 1.25, or in non-technical language, Zonite is two and twenty-five hundredths times as powerful a germ killer as pure carbolic acid.

But what a phenol coefficient of this sacrifices may be more clearly understood when it is explained that made with peroxide of hydrogen. Zonite is followed by actual laboratory tests to be 40 times as powerful as peroxide of hydrogen as sold by druggists.

Powerful But Non-Poisonous

Unlike carbolic acid, bichlorids of mercury and antiseptics of that class, Zonite is non-poisonous, non-irritating and non-caustic.

The tremendous germ killing and healing powers of Zonite suffices to show its distinctive position in the field of antiseptics. There are other differences, however, no less noteworthy. All other antiseptic powers are so deadly to kill multiplied germs and to burn, harden and destroy the tissues and membranes with which they come in contact. Even when diluted to the point where they have no killing, tissue-destroying effect, while greatly retards healing. Zonite on the other hand, has a mild and soothing effect upon the tissues and membranes with which it comes in contact, while known to materia medica. As to its effect upon the patient in commending the form of antiseptic you will have to go to far to find the germs as they and nature will heal any wound unite it is treated.

There are so many uses for Zonite that they can only be indicated adequately here. Briefly it will do all the old poisonous antiseptics can—bone antiseptics in the home, with a correct danger to every member of the family.

Solace to Thousands

Zonite, with an equal amount of water, makes a Carrel-Dakin solution, as testing confirmed. Zonite has distinct advantages over the Carrel-Dakin fluid. It is stable, concentrated and ready for immediate use. Zonite, with an equal amount of water, makes a Carrel-Dakin solution, as testing confirmed. Zonite has distinct advantages over the Carrel-Dakin fluid. It is stable, concentrated and ready for immediate use.

FACTS ABOUT ZONITE

1. Zonite is a concentrated, stabilized and perfected form of the Carrel-Dakin solution, the antiseptic discovered by two eminent scientists of the Rockefeller Institute, which accomplished such phenomenal results in the hospitals of the Allied armies and saved the lives of hundreds of thousands of desperately wounded men.

2. Zonite is more than twice as powerful as pure carbolic acid. It is more than forty times as powerful as any solution of carbolic acid, bichloride of mercury or iodine that can be used with safety on the human body.

3. Zonite is forty times as powerful as peroxide of hydrogen. It has from forty to a hundred times the germicidal power of many of the mild, pleasant-tasting or foaming antiseptics heretofore in general use.

4. Zonite is non-poisonous, perfectly safe to use and will rid the home of deadly poisons. Zonite is non-caustic, non-irritating and non-corrosive and will not injure the most delicate tissue or membrane. Zonite promotes tissue growth and is probably the most efficient healing agent known to materia medica.

5. When applied to a fresh cut or wound Zonite will destroy the germs which cause blood poisoning, gangrene and other similar forms of infection. It heals cuts and wounds with astonishing rapidity and with but little or none of the usual pain and inflammation.

6. On account of its great germicidal power and non-poisonous character, this is the one form of antiseptic which can be safely taken into the mouth at sufficient strength to destroy disease germs. This statement is endorsed by leading bacteriologists of the country.

7. Pyorrhea in its early stages can be checked by the use of Zonite in a few days' time. If the disease is so advanced that the germs have worked down to the roots of the teeth beyond the reach of the antiseptic, dental treatment is absolutely necessary, after which Zonite will aid in preventing the return of the disease.

8. Zonite is the ideal antiseptic for personal hygiene. It is no longer necessary for women to brave the dangers of poisonous compounds, the continued use of which is exceedingly harmful and deleterious to health.

9. Zonite can be sprayed into the mouth or throat at sufficient strength to destroy the germs which cause many contagious respiratory diseases.

10. Zonite is invaluable for treating old sores, running sores and slow healing wounds. It dissolves dead tissue, removes proud flesh, reduces inflammation and stops the discharge of pus, rendering the sore clean and healthy. A diluted solution will aid in rapid healing.

11. Zonite is invaluable in the sick room as a disinfectant and deodorant. It will destroy all disease germs with which it comes in contact and will disinfect fever thermometers, bed linen, dishes, drinking glasses and all sick-room utensils.

INTERNATIONAL COMMENT ON NEW SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY

Leading Publications of This Country and Europe Unite in Applauding Great Achievement of Rockefeller Institute Scientists

No achievement of modern science has called forth as much comment from the leading newspapers, magazines and writers of the world as did the epoch-making discovery of the Carrel-Dakin solution. Only a few of the many noteworthy comments are given below:

The Literary Digest very forcefully expresses the great value of this discovery in these words: "All we have to do is to treat germs as bad men and nature will heal any wound, unless it is mortal. The Carrel-Dakin treatment has been a marked success in a wide range of maladies, and its application is daily widening."

Harper's Magazine: "Dr. Carrel started out to save the lives of stricken soldiers, and Dakin to prevent, so far as his skill permitted, the bodily injuries of the wounded. In other words, his object was twofold—vital and physical conservation. He knew how important to France was the maintenance of her man power if for no better reason, and, falling short of this standard, to return the wounded back to civil life in a condition that would enable them to be self-supporting in some way or other and not public charges or burdens upon their loved ones.

"What he has done in behalf of the fighting forces becomes equally applicable to individuals and it is destined to mark in the year 1922 progress in the medical world as of the greatest importance. The Carrel-Dakin treatment of infected wounds in the last four years. At the beginning of the war about 75 per cent. of the amputations were performed because of infection and not because of the purely traumatic condition of the limb—about the same percentage as was performed in other wars and other brief years. Carrel and Dr. Dakin, with their associates, have conceived in arriving at a definite line of treatment for such infected wounds.

Collier's Weekly said, in part, "Today, thanks to Doctors Carrel and Dakin and their efforts, an unlooked-for revolution has been wrought in the treatment of the wounded. And the lesson of the battle front is being brought into everyday life and its consequences of incalculable good."

North American Review: "It is a real triumph, and almost for all time. The civil surgeon, the engineer, the employer, the public at large, will be the richer by this kind of skill have cause for rejoicing in the genius of the three great medical men who have spoken in their behalf of fatalities in war hospitals came from infection setting in after a wound had been sustained. In cases where infection had actually set in, the only choice lay between amputation and trusting to the curative powers of the human body itself. Dr. Dakin's solution is a thorough disinfectant, and yet avoids the caustic effects of the others. While the chemical properties of the solution are able to kill the bacteria and at the same time have a solvent effect upon dead tissues."

La Nature (Paris): "Greatest medical discovery since the days of Lister."

The Dayton Journal: "The Carrel-Dakin method is regarded as one of the foremost medical discoveries made during the war. Heretofore the loss of fatalities in war hospitals came from infection setting in after a wound had been sustained. In cases where infection had actually set in, the only choice lay between amputation and trusting to the curative powers of the human body itself. Dr. Dakin's solution is a thorough disinfectant, and yet avoids the caustic effects of the others. While the chemical properties of the solution are able to kill the bacteria and at the same time have a solvent effect upon dead tissues."

RACE FUND FOR MAYFLOWER STARTED

BOston and New England sport lovers, particularly those interested in the fishermen's races, are asked today to rally to the aid of the Invitation Fishermen's Race Fund which will be used to promote the special race between the Mayflower and the winner of the International Fishermen's Races.

A total of $5,000 is needed to furnish the prize money and pay the necessary expenses. The fund has been started, and judging from the first day contributions of $625, it will be quickly raised.

The subscriptions:

Boston American, $200.
Boston Post, $100.
Cauchis Hunt Company, $50.
Arnold Windeon Company, $50.
Fulham & Herbert Fisheries Company, $50.
Haskins Fish Company, $50.
Baker, Boise & Watson Company, $50.
L. H. Lothrop, $25.
Harry Bloomfield, $25.

Contributions will be acknowledged in the newspapers.

According to R. W. Pigeon, one of the owners of the schooner Mayflower, and A. L. Parker, treasurer of the fund, $5,000 of the sum will be used for prizes and the remainder for the expenses of putting on the race.

CAUSE OF FAIR PLAY.

"This is not a large sum that we are asking," said Mr. Pigeon, "and I feel that Boston and New England sport lovers will rally to the cause of justice and fair play and help make it possible for the Mayflower to go forth and show the Canadian fishermen just what she can do. I feel that if the Bluenose wins the International races the Mayflower will show her a clean pair of heels. That is what we want to show. That is why we want the race.

"Of course if the Bluenose is beaten why the race will be between the Henry Ford and the Mayflower. It will give the barred vessel the chance to show the entire sporting world that she is capable of defeating any fishing schooner in the world today.

"I am confident we will win. But if we should be beaten in the race, why there will be no chance for argument. We feel that the Mayflower should not have been barred. The general public feels the same way. Now is the chance to show the proper spirit by contributing to the race fund so the special race will be a success."

VINDICATION RACE.

Fishermen at the local fish pier talk of nothing else but the big special race in which the Mayflower will be allowed to show what she can do. It is being termed a vindication race. The fishermen are rallying to the financial support of the race as well in fine shape.

The Mayflower is expected to try her heir rails against the Elizabeth Howard next Friday in a trial race. She is being fitted with new sails and will be ready for any kind of race when she reaches Gloucester.

The Mayflower will be at T Wharf until Friday.

All contributions to the Invitation Fishermen's Race Fund should be sent to A. L. Parker, treasurer, No. 14 Boston Fish Pier, Boston, Mass.

HUSBAND IS POOR; SHE WANTS DIVORCE

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—A man's lack of riches is no ground for divorce, even though he may have pretended to wealth in his courtship, Judge Rodney ruled in the Superior Court yesterday in denying the plea of Mrs. Florence Williams for annulment of her marriage.

GIRL NOW WELL AND STRONG

Daughter Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as Mother Advised

Wauseon, Ohio.—"My daughter always had backache and leg-ache at certain periods and could not be on her feet at those times. We read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound doing girls so much good so she began to take it. That is two years ago and she is a different girl since then, able to do any work she wants to do—although she is still careful not to do heavy work—and so well and strong. We recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers with ailing daughters, and I give you permission to publish this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. A. M. BURKHOLDER, Route No. 2, Box 1, Wauseon, Ohio.

Something out of balance will affect the finest clock, causing it to gain or lose. The proper adjustment made, all is well. So it is with women. Some trouble may upset you completely.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct the cause of the trouble and all disagreeable symptoms will disappear.

Proud Mother

COUNTESS PAUL RAFFLY.

Boston friends today learned that Countess Paul Raffly, who was formerly Miss Dorothy Deacon of Boston, gave birth to a son at the palace of Lobkowatz, in Vienna. The Countess secured a divorce from Prince Radziwill at Rome last Winter.

DRAFT MODIFICATIONS OF SHIP DRY LAW

Washington, Oct. 19.—A new draft of regulations to carry out the bone-dry prohibition ruling of Attorney-General Daugherty was completed today by officials of the prohibition unit and taken under advisement by Secretary Mellon.

The point said to have given greatest difficulty relates to the presence of liquor on foreign ships within American territorial waters. It was indicated that some exceptions were proposed in favor of medicinal liquors and rations for crews on such vessels.

ONE DEAD, 100 ILL AFTER BANQUET

Dr. Frederic Knight, a former Methodist clergyman, is dead and approximately a hundred other ministers and prominent Bostonians have been made ill as result of a banquet in Convention Hall, Back Bay.

Dr. Frederic Knight

The guests were served with chicken salad, chicken pie, and lobster. They were also served with coffee, and comment on the fact that the coffee kettles appeared unclean was heard.

Bishop S. B. Fisher of India was the speaker of the evening. He left for New York immediately after the banquet and it has not been learned whether he was taken ill by the food.

The Boston Methodist Social Union, under whose auspices the banquet was held, conducted a rigid investigation into the poisoning case.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Frank Bonney, of No. 65 Greenough street, Brookline, were among those who were stricken with pains after the meal.

"Both my wife and I were ill after the banquet," Mr. Bonney stated. "My wife was sick when we arrived at home. I felt pains in my stomach the next morning. Mrs. Bonney did not eat any of the lobster, however."

Rev. Henry Dalley, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Temple street, Boston, was also poisoned by the food.

Others who attended the affair were:

Rev. Leo Nels of Somerville.
Rev. Henry Crane of No. 100 Washington street, Malden.
Rev. William Leslie, pastor of St. Mark's Church, Brookline.

Mr. Leslie admitted that he has been treated twice for poisoning since the banquet, but refused to say whether the illness was contracted at the dinner.

R. I. RESORTS DEFY GOVERNOR'S ORDERS

Providence, R. I., Oct. 19.—Despite orders issued by Governor San Souci to Chief of Police Kimball of Johnston to close the St. Cloud and Sunnyside hotels "and keep them closed," residents have informed the Governor that the places are again wide open. The Governor declared that he is powerless to do anything, as the law does not allow him to perform public duties. Citizens claim that girls from 18 to 20 years of age were frequenting these places.

Physician Explains Who Should Take Newer Form of Iron

Practical Advice on How To Help Build Up Great Strength, Energy and Endurance by Using Nuxated Iron

"Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable, easily faltered, but it utterly robs him of that virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. "It may not transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable, but it often does make her blood thin, pale and watery, and thus rob her cheeks of their natural beauty. Thousands of persons a year after year suffering from physical weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscles without ever realizing the real cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood you cannot get the most out of life, no matter what you do. Dr. Sullivan says an old mill with rollers so worn that the mill can't grind, can't make flour. For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, full of infirmity, poor in energy, nervous, irritable and all run down, while at 70 or 80 with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with vim and energy."

But be sure the iron you take is the newer form of iron and not metallic iron which people usually take. This newer form of iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron filings and is therefore an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron. This newer form of iron is so highly concentrated that one dose is estimated to be approximate equivalent to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen baked apples. It is like taking extracts of beef instead of eating pounds of meat.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using this newer form of iron known as Nuxated Iron. It is sold by most druggists and, to build up the strength, energy and endurance, Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if it does not produce satisfactory results.

For sale by Houghton Dutton, Eustis Drug Co., O. F. Fitz, A. S. Pierce and Armstrong Co. and all druggists.

People, Sick and Tired of Censors, Will Defeat Bill---Henry E. Hagan

"THERE is too much censorship already. The theatre-going public has had enough of it. I, for one, am opposed to any further censorship of anything.

"I believe that the arguments against the motion picture censorship that have appeared in the American are sound and that they announce the pulse of the people at large as to their wants. Public opinion has got to a point already where they are sick and tired of censors.

"The referendum should be defeated by an overwhelming vote by all who desire to still maintain their freedom.

"How long are the people going to stand to have some one tell them what they shall see, what they shall wear, where they shall go, what they shall read and where they shall purchase their merchandise, and unless this referendum is defeated, as it should be, that is surely what it is coming to. The people are their own censors."

HENRY E. HAGAN.

Statement of Henry E. Hagan, City Councillor and president of the Henry E. Hagan Company, Oblast Shoes, and prominent business man.

FIRM AGAINST CENSORSHIP

Boston workers are lining up solidly against movie censorship. And they do not intend to have movie-muzzling put across.

Here is what some of them have to say:

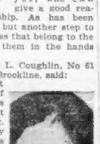
Agnes Doherty of No. 4 Anderson street, Boston, said:

Agnes Doherty

"These reformers are beginning to get tiresome. What is their real object in wanting film censorship, anyway? Are they really trying to better conditions, or are they anxious to make soft positions for some favored few? I have heard no one, as yet, who can give a good reason for censorship. As has been said before, it is but another step to take away liberties that belong to the people and put them in the hands of a clique."

Miss Margaret L. Coughlin, No 61 Texteth street, Brookline, said:

"I consider it silly to talk of censoring movies when they don't need censoring. There are plenty of other things that need more attention from our law-makers today than the movies. One would think we had no police force, to listen to pro-censors talk of the terrible shows that are being presented. I have yet to see a moving picture that was really improper and I doubt if anyone else has, especially during the past few years."



Margaret Coughlin

PERMISSION TO BREATHE.

Miss Evelyn Raffery of No. 15 Auburn street, Roxbury, has this opinion of censorship:

Evelyn Raffery

"Pretty soon we will have to ask permission to breathe. If we let these blue-sky workers have their way. But they will find out that they are not dealing with a flock of children, when election day comes. I have heard more than one man say that he was out to beat the censorship bill and I can say, for myself, that I am anti-censor, first, last and always."

Miss Florence McCarthy of No. 24 Day street, Jamaica Plain, speaks as follows:

Florence McCarthy

"What chance would labor have if an anti-labor man was appointed censor. He would cut out every bit of the films that boosted labor at all. That is what we will have pushed on us if the voters of the State do not wake up and fight this bill. What applies to labor would apply to everything else that was not agreeable to the censor. And what chance would a Democrat have of getting any publicity with a Republican in office as censor, or vice versa?"

HAVE YOU BAD SKIN

People Notice It. Clear It Up with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights. Counter the blood, bowel and liver ills with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the vegetable substitute for calomel, which is sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, but are effective only, but their action is gentle and they do not cause nor irritating. No one who takes Olive Tablets is disappointed with a "dark brown taste," bad breath, a dull, listless, "all-in" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face. Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. Dr. Edwards spent years among patients suffering with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the unfailingly effective result. Take one or two nights for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 10c, 25c and 50c.

Kidney Troubles Conquered or Money Back

Use Dr. Carey's Prescription No. 777

For 40 years, said Dr. Carey, I have been prescribing my prescription No. 777 known for years as Mentholoxy for kidney and bladder troubles and now that I have retired from active practice, I have arranged with druggists in leading cities to dispense this wonderful prescription at a moderate price, on the honest belief that if dissatisfied than ever before, thousands of people will be relieved of every pain or ache in stopping the leakings of the system. Watch the symptoms. If you see specks floating before the eyes, suffer sore, clammy feet or moist palms, if the kidneys disorder, you ought to get a bottle of Dr. Carey's famous prescription 777 right away.

It has wonderful benefits for all those who have had kidney and bladder troubles and is the medicine you can always depend upon. Results are guaranteed.

NOTE: Dr. Daniel G. Carey was a practicing physician for many years and during that time compiled No. 777 after a great deal of research into kidney and bladder troubles. Hereafter you can always get this same prescription in a bottle of Dr. Carey's famous prescription 777 right away, at Spaiten Drug Co., and other drug stores and all reliable pharmacies the country over.

PROVE PRESENT CENSOR LAW ADEQUATE

A break in the ranks of the Watch and Ward Society, over the matter of censorship is shown by recent developments.

While Rev. Frederick R. Allen of the society declares that present laws are inadequate to prevent indecent productions, Secretary Frank B. Chase is hailing into court a theatre manager who produced a play that, it is charged, savored of the improper.

Secretary Chase invoked Section 32, Chapter 272 of the General Laws, the law considered "inadequate" by the president.

General Charles H. Cole, chairman of the Committee of Massachusetts Citizens Against Censorship, in a letter to Rev. Mr. Allen calls the attention to this apparent split in the ranks of the Watch and Ward. Part of the General's letter is as follows:

"It is quite evident that your society believes in the effectiveness of this the present law because your secretary, Mr. J. Frank Chase, is now invoking it in prosecutions connected with the circulation of a book and with the wearing apparel of members of a musical comedy show.

"Do you, or does Mr. Chase, represent the real sentiment of your organization, as a whole?"

Today are printed more letters in the American's censorship contest. Cash prizes of $400 await the writers of the best letters. Two dollars will be paid for every letter published. Send in yours today.

WORK OF FANATICS.

Editor, Boston American:

Amendment No. 1 appears to be questioning the intelligence of our people, inferring that the time has come when some one, not of the people, but of a privileged class or sect must sit in judgment and tell us, as parents tell their children, what is or is not good for them.

Who can sit in judgment and judge impartially, bearing in mind the following:

"Let him without sin cast the first stone" and "Evil to him who evil thinketh."

This measure assumes what might be termed the work of fanatics. What is the matter with our present courts, if conditions are so bad that a censor is required? Are they paralyzed? Do we have sufficient legal machinery to care for obscene or otherwise offensive pictures.

Censorship is dangerous. An unreasonable person would work vast injury to the picture industry. Politicians, nearly alert in chase of this kind, are ready to create new jobs and throw away some more public money. Then the tax-payer would have to pay more taxes. It is time we put a stop to making unnecessary positions, especially one of this type, which tends to strangle freedom and the rights of the people.

THE JOY KILLERS.

Editor Boston American:—

They are at it again.

This time, its the movies that they single out for a killing.

They are the type of people who are fighting to make us near dumb, after we have struggled for years for freedom.

They do not consider the injurious effect the censorship of pictures will have on the people of this state.

If the people cannot see the pictures that they desire, naturally they will turn somewhere for amusement that may be far more dangerous than the showing of moving pictures that does not meet the approval of these high-minded chaps.

This is particularly true amongst the younger element. Then again, when a picture is produced these days, every little action and scene has a meaning pertaining to the plot of the play, and if these chosen few come along and put their stamp of disapproval on this scene and that act, it would be practically the same if they took a bolt here and a nut there from the machinery of your Ford.

For the benefit and pleasure of your family, and in justice to them and yourself, vote No on the censorship referendum November 7th.

WOODROW WILSON DEPRIVED OF VOTE

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 19.—Decision by the Mercer County Board of Elections to enforce the New Jersey election law of 1920, which provides that a voter must cast his ballot in the district "in which he actually resides and not elsewhere," probably will debar former President Woodrow Wilson of his voting privileges in New Jersey this year.

Mr. Wilson formerly lived in Princeton, a part of Mercer County, and voted there while President of the United States. He cannot vote in the District of Columbia, where he now lives, and the ruling yesterday bars him from voting here, according to local officials.

BRAGGIOTTI SISTERS ENTERTAIN CLUB

The Misses Francesca and Bertha Braggiotti, Boston society girls who are to appear in vaudeville next week here, danced at a gathering of the Girls' Club of Filene's. All the younger female employes of Filene's are members of the club, and once a month during the Fall and Winter season they have a get-together meeting in their own club rooms, in the Filene Co-operative Association. The Braggiotti sisters were enthusiastically received.

GIRL OF SIX, HIT BY COAL TRUCK, IS DEAD

Mary Grace Ridge, six years old, South Boston, is dead at the Carney Hospital as a result of injuries received when she was struck and run over by a five-ton coal truck. Police say the girl was running across the street in front of her home when she was struck by the truck.

Mary Ridge

The machine was operated by John Hay of No. 22 Bennett street, Jamaica Plain. He told the police he was operating the truck at the rate of about four miles an hour when the girl was struck.

TRUCK SMASHES A DUMP CART; DRIVER DEAD

Hugh Harkins, fifty-eight years old, of No. 107 East Eagle street, East Boston, was killed today when the dumpcart that he was driving was struck by a truck driven and owned by Jas J. Ward, No. 204 Auburn street, Roxbury.

Harkins was driving the dump cart at the corner of Marginal and Lewis streets, East Boston, when struck from behind by the truck. There was a terrific crash. He was thrown to the pavement, landing on his head and fracturing his skull. He was taken to the East Boston Relief Station, where he died ten minutes later.

BOSTON BOXER DIES OF INJURY IN N. Y. BOUT

Concussion of the brain, caused by a knockdown during a boxing bout on Saturday, caused the death of Walter Welsh, twenty-three, son of Lieutenant Edward J. Welsh of the Roxbury Crossing police station.

Young Welsh was a professional boxer and appeared in a bout at the Ninth Regiment Armory, New York. He was knocked down during the bout, his head hitting the floor with considerable force. He suffered no immediate effects, however. On Sunday he first complained of being dizzy. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital and on Tuesday night his condition became such that death ensued.

RAID LEADS TO WIFE'S SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Brother will testify against sister when wife testifies against husband

Mrs. Annie F. Budelkewer

In the divorce action of Stanislaw Budelkewer against Mrs. Annie F. Budelkewer, court interpreter, of No. 783 Cambridge street, Cambridge.

The husband alleges his wife is guilty of intimacy with a Cambridge doctor.

The wife charges that her husband is guilty of improper conduct with a married woman of South Boston.

Their daughter, Mrs. Annie Taylor, who lives with the mother, will take the stand and testify in behalf of her mother and against her father.

The son, Alexander Budelkewer, will be used by his father as a witness against the mother.

Alexander Budelkewer

Mrs. Budelkewer declares that her husband has been living as the husband of Mrs. Celeste Velesky, twenty-seven years old, of Bolton street, South Boston. Mrs. Velesky's husband, she said, recently left home to visit some relatives in Europe.

The wife recently led a raid on the home of Mrs. Velesky, and had her husband and the woman arrested on a statutory charge.

Budelkewer recently entered suit in the Middlesex Superior Court for divorce, alleging that she found his wife in a compromising situation with Dr. James Nolan at the latter's office, on Cambridge street, Cambridge.

The raid on Mrs. Velesky's flat was the first move on Mrs. Budelkewers' part to contest the divorce.

Both Mr. Budelkewer and Mrs. Velesky claim they were "framed."

He waxed bitter when he told of his life with his wife, which began twenty-four years ago in Webster. His wife was so jealous that he could not speak to another woman, he said. And once he said, she knocked him unconscious with a bottle because a girl said "good morning" to h m.

Loses Love Ring

MRS. MARY LEO.

BRIDE MOURNS $200 DIAMOND RING LOSS

Mary Leo, bride of a few weeks, who charges that Louis Rosen, a plumber, stole a $200 diamond ring from a shelf in the kitchen of her four-room love nest at No. 47 North Margin street, North End, is heartbroken over her loss.

"It was a symbol of our love and I would have cared less if it had been anything else, even the three tons of coal we have in the cellar," Mrs. Leo told a Boston American reporter today.

The ring was her engagement ring and there were many tender memories connected with it which made it very dear to her. She had taken it off to wash dishes and claims that Rosen, who, she says, had called ostensibly to offer an estimate on the cost of a plumbing defect in the kitchen, took it. When he left, she discovered that the ring was missing and immediately accused Rosen with the theft.

Judge Dowd, in the Municipal Court, found Rosen guilty and sentenced him to three months, but he appealed.

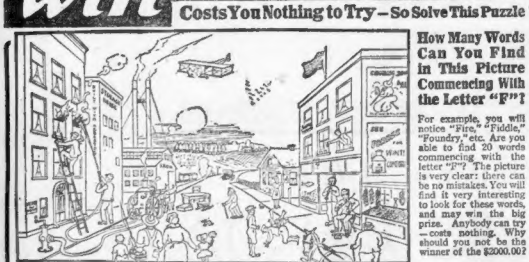
You Win $2000

Costs You Nothing to Try—So Solve This Puzzle



How Many Words Can You Find in This Picture Commencing With the Letter "F"?

For example, you will notice "Fire," "Fiddle," "Foundry," etc. Are you able to find 20 words commencing with the letter "F"? The picture is very clear; there can be no mistakes. You will find it very interesting to look for these words, and may win the big prize. Anybody can try—costs nothing. Why should you not be the winner of the $2000.00?

YOU SHOULD WIN The person having the largest list of words beginning with the letter "F" will get the First Prize. You surely have a real chance of winning at least one of the prizes offered—there are fifteen of them. Why not try for the big prize and win $2000.00. Somebody will win it—your chances are as good as anybody's.

Just think what you could do with the money. $2000.00 could buy an automobile and leave enough balance to make a payment on a cozy home. Perhaps you have in mind just the thing you would like to do if you received a check for $2000.00. Certainly you owe it to yourself to try to solve this puzzle. You will find the trying very easy and pleasant.

The Way to Win One of the Twenty Prizes

You do not have to spend a penny to get into this contest. It is not necessary for you to order any Yeastolax. If your list is adjudged to be one of the twenty best you will receive one of the cash prizes. Without your order for Yeastolax your list of words containing words like the letter "F" is the largest you receive the first prize of $750.00. If the second largest, the second prize, without your order for Yeastolax, you will get a check for $25.00; and so on down the line as shown in announcement.

Win the Big Prize—$2000.00

If you choose you can win a great deal more than the Class A prizes. All that is necessary for you to qualify your list for the BIGGER PRIZES is to send in an order for one or more packages of Yeastolax. Look over carefully the schedule of prizes as classified in this announcement. You will find that if you send in $1.00 for one package of Yeastolax and the judges award you first prize you will get $500.00. If you send in $7.00 for two packages of Yeastolax and your list is awarded first prize you will get a check for $900.00; and so on up. If you send in $5.00 for 6 packages of Yeastolax and the judges award you the first prize, you will receive the Big Prize of $2000.00. Should your list be judged as the second best you would receive $1000.00; and so on down the list. Remember, there are twenty prizes offered, as shown. All the opportunity one could desire. Go in to win the best prize.

$700.00 Extra Award for Promptness

Dec 15th, 1922 is the last day for receiving your solution to this puzzle qualifying you to win one of the prizes. But, note this: For every day before this date that your order for Yeastolax is received an extra prize of $10.00 for each and every day will be added to any first prize won. If you send in your order today you will get a rec. pt for the money; then you can send in your list any time before Dec. 15th and your list will be awarded for any of the prizes. We will award an extra $700.00 in this manner. You should try your very best to earn this additional award. It will cost you little additional effort. In case of ties we will award duplicate amounts of $700.00 to each contestant so trying. Don't overlook reading about our extra premium of 50,000.00 Genuine Russian Rubles, whether or not you enter this contest.

Go after the Big Prizes—don't delay—start right away—get into the contest. How many words can you find with the letter "F"? Great announcement—great opportunity. $2000.00 is awaiting your call. Now is the time to act.

Yeastolax Co. 1253 S. Michigan Av. DEPT. M410 Chicago

RULES, 1 This puzzle is open to everybody except employees and relatives of the Yeastolax Co.

2 The First Prize will be awarded to the person giving the largest number of words beginning with the letter "F." The Second Prize will be awarded the second Prize and so on down the list of Twenty Prizes. The awards will be made on the basis of the words submitted, and not from a predetermined list. Should more than one person submit the same list, the full prize will be awarded to each contestant so tying.

3 Words of synonymous meaning and words of the same spelling but different meaning will not count. Use either the singular or plural of a word. Only words appearing in Webster's International—and not obsolete words will be considered.

4 Words must be numbered 1, 2, 3, etc., in consecutive order.

5 The contest will be decided by three judges independent of and not connected with the Yeastolax Co. These judges will award the prizes. The contestants agree to abide by the decisions of these judges, as it is impossible for such decisions to be overthrown. The names of prize winners winning largest list of words will be published as soon as possible after the contest closes. Prizes will be awarded by telegraph to anyone living at a stamped, addressed envelope. Two or more persons submitting a correct list, the same prize will be awarded to each one so tying.

6 Lists of names must be received at contest department, 1253 S. Michigan Av., Chicago, on or before Dec. 15th. For every day before the date that the list is received an extra prize of $10.00 will be added to any first prize won. If you send in $1.00 for one package of Yeastolax and your list is awarded first prize you will get a check for $900.00; and so on up. If you send in $5.00 for 6 packages of Yeastolax and the judges award you the first prize, you will receive the Big Prize of $2000.00. Should your list be judged as the second best you would receive $1000.00; and so on down the list. Remember, there are twenty prizes offered, as shown. All the opportunity one could desire. Go in to win the best prize.

7 Words of foreign origin, unless they are commonly accepted in English, will not be considered.

8 Words must be numbered 1, 2, 3, etc., in consecutive order.

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND GOSSIP

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

SOME of these film publicity persons are more in need of a censor than the films themselves. After sending out a lot of stuff about the wonderful musical score written for "Robin Hood," the new Fairbanks picture by Dr. Boris Duney, celebrated Russian composer and musician, an article by one Mark Larkin is now in my hands describing the process of "making music."

"First the notes are arranged for the tune itself by Dr. Duney, who then turns his work over to J. Cronshaw to orchestrate. Mr. Cronshaw breaks up the music for the various instruments. This is known as scoring the music."

This ingenious statement if true, proves that the celebrated Dr. Boris Duney is a ham composer who can't orchestrate his own composition, but turns them over to a musical hack who can orchestrate, but can't compose. For the benefit of this press agent we will state that all the composers of good music, from Beethoven down to Puccini, would no more dream of letting anybody except themselves make their orchestrations than they would let anybody else compose their melodies. The guileless press agent has demonstrated that Dr. Boris is a tin pan alley composer. And the sad part of it is that the exquisite score of the opera of "Robin Hood" might have been used for the Fairbanks picture.

USE LOS ANGELES SHIPS.

THE Los Angeles shipbuilding industry plays an important part in Marshall Neilan's new production, "The Strangers' Banquet," an adaption of Donn Byrne's colorful novel.

In the past few years the shipbuilding industry at San Pedro has has grown to such an extent that it compares favorably with the leading ports of the country. There, with thousands of workers supplying the "atmosphere," Mr. Neilan is now picturizing some of the most dramatic situations in Donn Byrne's book.

WOLHEIM IN SHERLOCK HOLMES.

LOUIS WOLHEIM, who appears briefly in "Sherlock Holmes," John Barrymore's latest screen production, which Goldwyn is releasing, is a Cornell University man who was started on his stage career by the star's brother, Lionel Barrymore. He appeared with Lionel in "The Claw" and last year made a big hit as the stoker in the Provincetown Players' production of "The Hairy Ape," by Eugene O'Neill. He is now touring in that play.

AUTHOR AN "EXTRA"

UNTIL the completed film of "Remembrance" was run off at the Goldwyn studio it was not known that Rupert Hughes, who wrote the original story and the scenario and then directed the production, had also played an "extra" part in his picture. In one scene he walks before the camera and lifts his hat. This started an outburst of cheering on the part of the studio officials as soon as they recognized the author. There is only one thing left for Mr. Hughes to do in the matter of picture making, and that is to star in one of his own personally written adapted-directed stories.

"STOPS SHOW."

OUT at Hollywood Lupino Lane, the English comedian, who is starring in Fox pictures, not only made good pictures, but many friends. He appeared at all benefits and at the writer's review recently made the big hit of the show. Lane and his "one man drama" are a combination much in demand.

CAFE OF THE DEEP.

THE Cafe of the Deep, a dance palace unique in the amusement world for its beautiful mural decorations, the character of its patronage and the fact that the clink of a cash register never marred the pleasure of its guests, came into being a few days ago, sparkled for one brilliant assemblage, then closed its doors.

REPUBLICAN BASE DISCOVERED IN CORK

Cork, Oct. 19 (By the Associated Press).—The arrest of H. O'Mahony, a Cork Republican, led today to the discovery of an important Republican base in this city. In a house on the Grand Parade was found evidence that the building was used not only as headquarters for the Republican publicity campaign but as the centre of a military organization.

Free State troops under an intelligence officer seized a large amount of literature, typewriters, aid dressings, first aid outfits and ovisions.

AMERICANS IN VLADIVOSTOK UNDER GUARD

By the Associated Press.

Tokio, Oct. 19.—Lawlessness reigns in Vladivostok as the result of the approach of a victorious "Red" army official dispatches say.

The French Consulate was attacked, and foreigners have appealed to their governments for protection.

The American Consul has engaged as a refuge for Americans a building flying the American flag and guarded by the guns of an American cruiser.

Two Japanese cruisers and three Japanese destroyers are also in Vladivostok Harbor to aid in the protection of foreigners.

Recent reports have related the practical annihilation of the White Guards, under General Dieterichs. The invading army of the Far Eastern Republic of Siberia apparently was marching on Vladivostok unhindered, and the capture of the Siberian port was expected momentarily.

ARREST 200 IN PORTLAND, ORE., I. W. W. PLOT

Portland, Ore., Oct. 19.—More than 200 men were under arrest here today following Mayor George L. Baker's declaration that Portland was threatened by an invasion of thousands of members of the Industrial Workers of the World, coming here to participate in the water front strike, and his orders to the police to round them up.

In wholesale raids in sections of the city where most of the dock workers reside, 350 men were arrested. When they had been checked over 225, most of them believed to be members of the Marine Transport Industrial Union No. 51 of Portland, were jailed on charges of vagrancy. The others were released.

William Ford, said to be head of the Portland I. W. W. organization, was among those arrested. He was released on $500 bail furnished by Frank Cornell, a member of the International Longshoremen's Union here.

Two of the men arrested, according to the police, were identified as I. W. W. organizers from Chicago. Their names were given as Elmer Hanson and Swen Swanson. George Quinlisber, secretary of the Portland branch of the I. W. W., also was taken into custody.

LAW LECTURES FOR WOMEN VOTERS

"Law Every Woman Should Know" is the subject of a course to be given under the joint auspices of the Boston University College of the Secretarial Science and the Boston League of Women Voters, which starts Wednesday, October 25, and continues for twenty weeks. Among the subjects for discussion are domestic relations, the making of wills, and the handling of property. The course will be given by Miss Beasie N. Page, lecturer at Boston University and D. H. L. Ferrin, professor of law at Boston University. Enrollments are being made by the Boston League of Women Voters, No. 2 Joy street.

DANCER BEGAN STAGE CAREER IN CALCUTTA

Nitza Vernille, famous Oriental dancer in "Spice of 1922," at 885 Boston Opera House began her stage career in Calcutta. She later created a sensation at the Folies Bergere in Paris by introducing her Javanese idol dance, in which she appears clad only in a "costume" of imported paint, in fantastic gold silver, blue and orange colors. She is featuring this same dance in the "Spice" revue.

"It all started at the Engineers' Club in Calcutta," says Nitza. "Three years ago my mother and I were touring the Orient and were invited to lunch there. Indian musicians entertained during the meal. Their music interested me. The rhythm was exactly that which I had studied at the La Chimola school in California. You see, I was born in San Francisco in 1903 of French parents. Ruth St. Denis taught me the fundamentals of Oriental dancing when I was a little girl.

"Prior to my visit to India I had never been on the stage. Two Hindu musicians fascinated me so that I arranged a rehearsal at the Opera House and persuaded them to play some of their chants to which I put my dance steps. Finally I met a French music hall manager happened to be at the rehearsal and asked me to join a vaudeville engagement at his theatre in Calcutta.

"My dances, and the accompaniment of the Hindus, took the fancy of three months I remained in Calcutta. At that time I had my present costume. I had some difficulty in getting a sufficient number of bells for the dance of the Tiger Moth. I am what a dancer wears and every one of my dances has its particular legend.

CONCERTS GIVEN BY ANGELS

Alexander the Great Among Those to Enjoy Cherubim Solos on Radio in Heaven

Chicago, Oct. 19. — Julius Caesar has turned from his ancient idea of conquering the world and gone in for radio. Alexander the Great has joined him in his experiments and a celestial broadcasting station is under way.

These reports on the progress of radio in heaven were given to 600 mediums assembled here for the annual convention of the National Association by John Slater, famous medium, of Pasadena, Cal.

"All sport messages have already been received," Mr. Slater asserted. By means of radio with the assistance of a radio engineer I expect to get better results.

"This I expect to see the spirit set up a wonderful broadcasting station heaven as hos more fully master the principles of wireless telephony.

"Seeing time and wave lengths will of course be adjusted so that the bed time stories and grain market reports won't be interrupted, but I feel sure that regular service will be given.

Interest in radio is not restricted to merely "transposed" spirits, but Julius Caesar and Alexander the Great are greatly interested in its development.

"The radio broadcasting idea is really an old one among the spirits. The spirits on the other side have been broadcasting music for ages but we just didn't know how to listen in.

With his son's invention Mr. Slater said he hopes soon to be able to tune in on the celestial concerts, receive music from the cherubim choirs and solos from the arch angels. So far, however, the angels except in very rare instances, have kept aloof from the dwellers on the mundane sphere, according to the California medium.

"Spirits are very super or people, he said, "and the higher the plane they occupy the less they seem inclined to converse with ordinary folks."

The spirit radio, he said, seems to be the only hope living persons will have of hearing the angelic voices raised in song.

Other enlightening details of spirit existence were given by Mrs. Maggie Waite, noted woman medium.

"Spirits tell me," said Mrs. Waite, "that they do not eat. They simply inhale the aromas of our earthly meals.

"They do not sleep, but have periods of rest.

"There is sex in heaven, just the same as here, but there is no marriage. Everyone will find his or her soulmate there, the one they missed on earth, and when they meet they hold hands for all eternity.

"Spirits, whose earthly lives were not exemplary are placed on probation. Among the probationers are Caesar and Alexander, while Callus and Tiberius are really notorious characters in the beyond, just as they were on earth. They don't move in select circles."

Wife's Love Valued at 6 Cents by Jersey Jury

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 19 —A jury returned a verdict of six cents for Frank T. Voelker, baker and former member of the Atlantic City Tax Board, in his suit against Fred G. Nixon Nirdlinger for $150 000 damages for the alleged alienation of the affections of Mrs. Voelker. The defence offered no testimony.

An effort was made through the testimony of Miss Lydia Palmer, sister of Mrs. Voelker, to prove Nirdlinger the father of a child born to Mrs. Voelker last year.

R R CRASH SLAYS MOTOR DRIVER

Great Barrington, Oct. 19 —A collision between a locomotive and a motor truck loaded with stone resulted today in the death of George Sealy of Franklin, N. H., driver of the truck, injuries to Engineer Mahoney and damage to the engine, as well as the demolition of the truck.

Sealy was employed by a road making construction company. Mahoney was hurt by flying pieces of stone. Traffic on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad was tied up for some time.

MIDNIGHT SHOW OF "OH JOY" TONIGHT

There will be a midnight performance at the Arlington Theatre tonight by the "Oh Joy!" Company of colored actors and actresses who have amused Boston audiences for the past three weeks.

The performance is being staged for the benefit of members of the troupe and the guests will be the members of the other show in town, including the stars and leading actors and actresses.

The regular peppy, musical performance will be staged and the general public will be admitted. Boston has had professional matinees, but this is the first professional matinee beginning at midnight ever held here.

TRAIN HITS AUTO; 1 DEAD, 1 HURT

Lenox, Oct. 19 —An unidentified man was instantly killed and Daniel Mahoney, a railroad engineer, badly hurt when a New Haven express crashed into a heavy auto truck at Kellogg's Crossing, in Sheffield, today.

The train, southbound, from Pittsfield to New York, hit the truck with terrific force, throwing it 25 feet clear of the crossing. The driver was hurled out and died instantly of a broken neck and his wrist was also broken. Pittsfield police are trying to identify him.

13 ARMY HORSES LEFT IN ENDURANCE TEST

Burlington, Vt., Oct. 19.—Thirteen horses, survivors of twenty-two starters last Monday, cantered out of the Fort Ethan Allen stables today for the run to Jeffersonville and return that constituted the fourth day's assignment of the three hundred mile army endurance test. Major A., a high grade Morgan gelding, was withdrawn at the last minute after an inspection showed that he was stiff and sore. Rustum Boy were bonis behind as a precaut on against injury by interference if he begins to tire. It was the fact that the horse interfered behind in the last day of the 1921 run that prevented him from winning. Only Gold Review, a thoroughbred, had a perfect time score up to today

SAYS K. K. K. CONTROLS GEORGIA PRIMARIES

Atlanta, Ga., Oct 19.—Mrs. William H. Felton, junior United States senator from Georgia until November 7, today charged that the Ku Klux Klan, "through its 50,000 Klucrs throughout Georgia," controlled and conducted the Democratic primary in which Governor Thomas W. Hardwick and two other candidates were overwhelmingly defeated for the late Tom Watson's Senate seat by Walter R. George of Vienna, Ga. Mrs. Felton said "Georgia politics will continue to be rotten until the good people wake up and vote on our elections," she pointed out that, in the state of 1,000 000 a scant 80,000 votes were cast yesterday. "I am informed from reliable sources," said she, "that approximately 80,000 Ku Kluxers are registered

REVEAL BOSTON CRIME TRUST, WITH GIRL AGENTS

RICH MEN BACK GANG OF SHOPLIFTERS AND FORGERS

A carefully organized crime trust, backed by wealthy Boston men with a woman go-between, using young women as pawns, was revealed today through the conviction of Ethel Whelan, alias Ethel Wheeler, alias Annie Goldstein.

The Whelan girl was convicted in Brighton Court of shoplifting and sentenced to Sherborn, after her alleged pal and accomplice, Ethel Miller, alias Mrs. Maxwell Jackson, had defaulted.

Her arrest was brought [illegible] through the Stores Mutual Protective Association, but the revelations regarding the activities of the crime trust were made as a result of police investigations.

It was discovered that the gang was using a string of luxuriously furnished apartments and that their activities ranged from shoplifting to forging and uttering.

A professional bondswoman was one of the go-betweens, the so-called master minds having provided her to obtain the release of the girl workers when they fell foul of the law.

SEEK ANOTHER GIRL.

In addition to the Miller girl, who defaulted, the police are searching for a young girl whose name is [illegible] said to be Smith.

They will also question Miss Wolf [illegible] as Mrs. Helen Grace, alias Mrs. [illegible] George, [illegible] one of the criminals, and are seeking a well known sporting man and several [illegible].

So successful were the gang in [illegible] operations that more girls were [illegible], and the police found evidence that Ethel Whelan had been [illegible] among her former [illegible].

The revelations came through the [illegible] of the Miller girl on a department store charged with the larceny of a $75 dress. The girl was [illegible] a short time later. The [illegible] girl went to the Municipal Court and giving her name as Annie Goldstein offered bonds for Miss [illegible]. She said she had a $2,000 equity in a $4,000 property on Tremont street, [illegible] Parker Square, becoming surprised when [illegible] girl before Judge Dowd, whereupon [illegible] broke down and confessed she was Lillie Whelan. She was released with a reprimand.

LOOT IS DISCOVERED.

Later on it was discovered that the Miller girl had taken property from other department stores and placed the whole in the bundle room of another downtown establishment.

A search warrant was obtained by Sergeant Kerrigan and Special Officer Butler of Station 10, who then raided an apartment on Huntington avenue, in which the Miller woman lived.

She was not at home, but while the search was being made the Smith girl, who had previously admitted she bought a stolen hat from Miss Miller, made her appearance. She left hurriedly on seeing the officers, and no attempt was made to apprehend her.

The apartment, furnished in a lavish manner, and according to the police, the scene in the past of many [illegible] parties in which students took part, contained stolen merchandise valued at about $900.

About the same time Special Officer Walter Brown of the Brighton station, also armed with a search warrant, visited another apartment [illegible] No. 1005 Commonwealth avenue, a door to the former home of Mr. Charles [illegible].

Here [illegible] Mrs. Grace or [illegible] was known, who made no attempt to interfere with [illegible] activities. The policeman searched the rooms and found stolen goods valued at several hundreds of dollars.

While he worked, Mrs. Grace smoked a cigarette and engaged in desultory conversation. Before the search was completed the Whelan girl entered the apartment and was placed under arrest.

A short time later the group received a visit from the brother of Mrs. Grace, and later a chauffeur dropped in for a moment and hurriedly dropped out.

SPORTING MAN CALLS.

Officer Brown waited a short time longer. Soon a well known sporting man, considered extremely wealthy, who has always been ready to put up money for bonds when certain persons were in difficulties, appeared.

He expressed curiosity at the size of the gathering, and when told what was going on, took his departure.

In the Brighton court today the Whelan girl admitted to Judge Connolly that Mrs. Grace had induced her to go to the Municipal Court and attempt to bail Miss Miller. She declared Mrs. Grace had made out the papers and coached her in what she was to say. She appealed her sentence and was released on bonds furnished by a man who was blacklisted as a bondsman by former District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier seven years ago for using straw bonds.

ONE WOMAN DEFAULTS.

The Miller woman defaulted in the Roxbury and Municipal courts where she was to have been charged with larceny. It is understood additional charges will be preferred against her by the Brighton police.

It was learned that both these girls, in addition to being shoplifters, had entertained students extensively at the Huntington avenue apartment. The police said the Whelan girl was arrested with Frank A. Wilson, alias Minnie last Spring on a bad check charge.

Police Inspector Harry Purce attached to the district attorney's office is investigating the foregoing end of the story.

Hub Girl Lays Arrest to Queen of Shoplifters

A clever New York woman shoplifter in Boston preying on Boston department stores and women's specialty shops.

This was revealed to the Boston American by Miss Ethel Whelan, pretty nineteen year-old girl, who was sentenced to Sherborn in the Brighton district court today, after she was found guilty of receiving stolen property.

Miss Whelan was accused of receiving a beautiful beaded dress valued at more than $100, which was stolen from a Boston department store. It was the New York woman, Miss Whelan alleges, who sold the dress to Miss Whelan.

"The woman came to me and told me that she had a pretty dress which she would sell me for $35," said Miss Whelan. "I looked at the dress and realized that it was worth a lot more than that. I asked her why she wanted to sell it so cheap and she told me that it had become too tight for her and was not comfortable.

DENIES BEING THIEF.

"I liked the dress. The woman seemed honest enough and, as she was known to my friends, I did not think there was anything wrong. I bought it and paid her the $35. If I had thought for a minute that the dress had been stolen I would never have taken such a chance.

"Now they say that I knew. Well, they are all wrong. I have been the 'sap' in this case. They have made me the original 'goof,' 'sucker' and all of those things. I am as innocent as any girl ever was. They simply made me the 'goat' and I am getting all the blame. I have never stolen anything and I have never taken anything that I knew was stolen. I want my friends to know that. I want them to know that I am innocent.

"I have not told the name of the New York woman. I will not tell it for anything unless I am pushed too far. I do hope that no one will try to blame Cora Miller for it, for Cora is all right. She is a nice girl and would not do anything wrong.

"The whole trouble started when Miss Wolfe who is known as Madame George told me to go to court yesterday and bail out Cora Miller who was under arrest on a charge of taking merchandise from a Boston store. I knew nothing about such things as bail, but Mrs. George or May Wolfe told me just what to do and gave me a paper which was all fixed up with seals.

TOOK WOMAN'S WORD.

"She told me that the papers were made out in the name of Annie Goldstein, but that that would be all right. I did not know any better and so I said I would go, and went. When the judge asked me his name I told him that it was Ethel Whelan as I did not say that I was Anne Goldstein.

"If I had been trying to put anything over I would not have given my own name. I was just the poor 'dupe' who was being rushed into trouble without knowing it.

"When I went back to the apartment of Mrs. George on Commonwealth avenue to tell her of the trouble she was not there.

"I had been told that Mrs. George was a professional bondswoman and so did not have any doubt in my mind of the legality of the bail when she told me what to do. I thought that a bondswoman ought to know her business. Now I am wondering just why she did not go herself.

"Now that I am in trouble I do not see her coming around to help me out. No, I am the 'sap.' I know that I am innocent and I am sure I will never have to serve the sentence given me in court. I am a good girl. I am a hard worker, and Mr. Grace knows it.

DEFENDS HER RECORD.

Miss Whelan said that she went to go to school with the Miller girl [illegible] and that Miss Miller was [illegible] for some weeks with a house on [illegible].

"A few days ago I met Mrs. George and Miss Wolfe on a bad block full of [illegible] at No. 1056 Commonwealth avenue. She was very nice to me and Cora. I stayed there all night and day. It was then that I met the man who sold me the dress.

"I am a music student and have been working right along. I did not have to steal anything or buy anything that had been stolen. I bought a fur coat and paid more than $50 for it from the money I earned as a manicurist.

Miss Whelan denied any knowledge of a group of girls who are plying their trade as shoplifters in Boston.

RAID BIG TREMONT ST. STILL

Police Take 4 Loads of Equipment and $5,000 in Liquor From 3-Story Building

The most extensive moonshining plant ever uncovered here was exposed today when Captain Herbert Goodwin of the Lagrange Street station, with a squad of officers, raided the three-story brick building at No. 378 Tremont street.

Armed with search warrants, following a tip and investigations which it is expected will lead to the complete exposure of the Boston bootlegging and moonshine ring, the police broke into the building.

The entire three stories were used by the moonshiners. Complete equipment for the manufacture, testing and bottling of the hooch was found. Four truck loads of stores and paraphernalia were seized, including $5,000 worth of manufactured liquor.

Following the raid the police began a search for the ringleader of the gang operating here. They refused to divulge his name, but stated that an arrest will be made within a few hours. No arrests were made at the premises, although several workmen made their escape as the officers entered. Two 75 gallon stills were in operation at the time.

The seizure included two 75 gallon stills, two 50 gallon stills, nine 5 gallon cans of "shine," sixteen 2 gallon cans of the same, four gas stoves, one 50-gallon barrel of mash and 68 empty bottles, besides coils, tools, sugar, rye and other ingredients of the liquor.

The police intimated that the leader of the gang whom they are seeking, was held in the Roxbury Court last week on liquor violations.

$15,000 Portland Fire

Portland Me., Oct. 19.—Paintings and house furnishings valued at $15,000 were burned in a two-alarm fire which broke out in the home of Charles H. Payson, Portland banker and millionaire. A soldering iron, left behind by roofers who had been working on the house, started the blaze. The family was in New York and the house was unoccupied.

BESIEGE DEALERS FOR COAL

Thousands, Driven by Cold Spell, Demand Immediate Supply of Anthracite

Boston and suburban coal dealers spent a feverish day today.

Beginning at 9 a. m., orders, requests, demands and prayers began to pour in by telephone and in person from thousands of individuals who felt today the first real foretaste of Winter. The coal men reported the were taking orders twice as fast as they could fill them.

Most dealers are supplying from a ton to two tons to each customer as fast as possible. Orders are filled in rotation as received, except in special cases. Many are now filling June and July orders, and a few have begun on August and September orders.

SCORN SOFT COAL.

Dealers report that there is no disposition on the part of householders to take soft coal.

"When they see a load of hard coal going by," one dealer said, "they simply refuse to have anything to do with the soft. What soft coal is sold goes mostly to the suburbs."

Coke dealers reported that orders had only slightly increased since cold weather set in last Monday, indicating that everyone is trying to get by on hard coal alone.

The supply of anthracite is very low, many dealers reporting only the pea size. Shipments are coming in steadily, but are small in quantity and are nowhere near enough to fill the orders. Dealers are making a special effort to supply homes where there are babies or invalids.

TAKEN AWAY IN AUTOS.

While the dealers have not yet established the "bread lines" of war days, most of them are willing to supply small quantities to those who can take them away. Several have risked the finish of fine automobiles for the sake of a few bags of the black stuff.

Quotations on hard coal today were in the neighborhood of $15 and $16 in the regulation sizes. Pea coal sold slightly less. Soft coal sold around $15.

SOUTH BOSTON BOY, HIT BY AUTO, DYING

Peter Starisky, eleven years old, is dying at his home after being struck by a motor car on Summer street, near the Army Base, after he had attempted to board another auto. He suffered a fractured skull and other injuries. The parents took him from City Hospital to their home at No. 291 Silver street, South Boston at though physicians told them that he had a chance for life if left at the hospital. The auto that struck the child was operated by Arthur H. Thomas of Revere.

PETITION AUTO CO. IN BANKRUPTCY

The Chandler Motors of New England, Inc., of Boston was petitioned into bankruptcy today in the Federal Court by three creditors, whose claims totaled $1,348.46. The largest claim was that of Fred J. Driscoll of Newtonville, $762.98 for insurances. The other two were James W. Queen of this city with a claim for $563.50 for advertising and Charles N. James of Cambridge, $39.10 for labor.

Saved From Fine on Eve of Wedding

MARGARET BARRETT AND GEORGE MILBERRY.

The fact that he is to be married next week saved George Milberry of No. 70 Garfield avenue, Revere, from $50 in fines when he was arraigned in the Chelsea Municipal Court for traffic law violations.

Judge Bosson found him guilty of speeding his motorcycle, not having his registration and driving without a license. He imposed a fine of $20 in each case.

"Please, Judge, I'm to be married next week," said Milberry.

"All right, I'll be easy with you," replied Judge Bosson. "Will you give me an invitation to the wedding?"

The Judge accordingly suspended two of the fines and placed the third count on file.

REPORTS GAIN IN DRUNKENNESS

The number of criminal cases brought into Municipal Court has fallen off during the year ending September 31 according to the report of Clerk Edward J. Lord, filed with Chief Justice Bolster today.

Drunkenness and liquor cases increased, while other cases fell off. The new narcotic squad brought in 329 drug violators.

FORTUNE LEFT HER BY FIANCE

Providence Miss Was Betrothed to Rich Merchant; Kin to Contest Will

Providence, Oct. 19.—Poverty, pluck, fine romance and riches.

This is the story modestly told by Helen Fuerth of her rise from a poor factory girl to private secretary to the late Adolph Lederer, then to being her employer's betrothed and now chief beneficiary of his $250,000.

Miss Fuerth told her story to Judge Stone at Municipal Court hearing on the probate of Lederer's will. Judge Stone allowed the will to be probated. Miss Julia Lederer, sister of the testator, is preparing to appeal to the Superior Court, but Miss Fuerth is prepared to fight any move to upset the will.

Helen Fuerth's career reads like a feminine version of the "Ragged Dick" and "Tattered Tom" series.

She came to this country from her girlhood home in Bohemia, Germany. Her first job was "kicking" a footpress in Adolph Lederer's jewelry factory in this city.

She had known Lederer back in Bohemia, so she found employment in his factory. Although her place was humble the girl determined to better herself in this "Land of the Free."

She applied herself so industriously to her press "kicking" that she was given a chance to try her hand at minor work in the office.

WEALTH BEFORE MARRIAGE.

But she was not equipped to rise in office work. She improved herself by going to night school for bookkeeping courses. She rose in office work as her employer rose in wealth. She was finally appointed his private secretary, in charge of the office work and also entrusted with many of Lederer's private affairs.

WEALTH BEFORE MARRIAGE.

Meanwhile the romance between her employer and herself came. Lederer apparently was bent on making a fortune before he assumed responsibilities of marriage. They became engaged, Miss Fuerth said, six years ago and Lederer put a betrothal ring on her finger. But their wedding plans were held in abeyance until he should have accumulated the wealth he sought.

Then came sickness, which ended in Lederer's death September 2. The jewelry manufacturer arranged, however, for his fiancee to have the wealth that he had planned to bestow on her by marriage.

CHINATOWN QUEEN MURDER WITNESS

Irene Harrington, "Queen of Chinatown," will be one of the star witnesses for the State in the trial of Yok Quong, charged with the murder of Donald B. Dunn, Boston University student, last April. It is thought by the police that Miss Harrington may be able to shed some light on the previous activities of Dunn. His body was found with a knife thrust through the head. It is the theory of the police that an experienced "hatchet thrower" may have committed the deed.

The Halls were vacationing at Islesford. Hall rowed his fiancee's church mail, including business like notes from Mrs. Mills at Islesford. The love letters were sent by Hall at Seal Harbor, two and one-half miles from Islesford and there he received Mrs. Mills' heart messages.

"Yesterday a party of us went to S. W. Harbor and climbed one of the mountains there so I had no chance to go to Seal Harbor then. I thought surely today would be a good day but I'm set in—so this morning I waited for the afternoon & then the fog was thicker than ever. Tonight it is fog, but the wind has shifted some west so I think it will be clear.

"So I took advantage of the fog to [illegible] up the cards to the parish so they are in the mail and will go out tomorrow.

LEGION RESOLVE ASKS SAWYER BE OUSTED

By The Associated Press.

New Orleans, Oct. 19.—A resolution demanding the removal of Brigadier-General Charles E. Sawyer as head of the Federal Hospitalization Board was presented to the American Legion Convention by Department Commander Barron of Minnesota. It charged "utter unfitness."

The fourth day of the national convention was marked by the arrival of the commander of the American Expeditionary Forces, General John J. Pershing.

The general, officers and staff aide leaped from the platform of the sleeping car ahead of his staff officers and grasped the hands of the soldier who had come to the train to meet him.

Major Frank Scott, a medical officer serving as executive officer to Colonel Forbes, director of the United States Veterans Bureau, and a representative of the Associated Press that Colonel Forbes desired to return to Washington focused a long distance telephone conversation with officials in Washington in close touch with the President. According to the words usually following "the chief executive said that he'd like was at liberty to use his judgment as to remaining here."

Director Scott told the Associated Press he regarded the Legion as a growing organization and believed the last blow had been struck to it when Director Hershey declined to resign for political purposes.

Abel T. Davis, head of the Legion committee on American relations, declared today to be the outstanding candidate for national commander. Supporters of William F. Hassan, New York State Commander, appeared discouraged by rumors the Missouri delegation and the entire "Mid West Coalition" had split and that the South with the exception of Kentucky was lined up in favor of Davis.

Among other matters to be presented to the City of Paris upon its return to Europe, it was said, Dudley Field Malone, head of the American Relief Administration, will present a bronze statue of Lafayette, to be placed in the Place des Etats Unis.

Another feature of the convention will be a banquet to General Pershing at the Southern Yacht Club.

Braggiotti Sisters to Appear on Stage Again Next Week, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

"DANCING is not only our profession, but our hobby."

Thus do both Berthe and Francesca Braggiotti signify that in the interpretation of terpsichore lies not only their life work, but their greatest happiness. They do other things, of course—Berthe is very fond of swimming and Francesca of riding—but they are both happiest when they are swaying to some haunting refrain.

Just how well they do the latter, Boston will have another opportunity of seeing next week, when these two misses are coming to Keith's Theatre, Lower Tremont, when they make their first appearance at that theatre, every seat in the house was taken throughout the entire week.

"You don't know how we are looking forward to our return engagement," said Berthe, and here her lovely golden earrings danged a bit for emphasis. "Every one was so wonderful to us when we appeared in July, that's it's more than a pleasure to return there on Monday."

These two fascinating girls—they are both decided brunettes—will spend somewhat of the entire Summer at "Miralden," the open air school of Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn at Peterboro, N. H., etc led for about a month at the New York studio of these famous artists.

Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, both declared enthusiastic, are without doubt the two greatest American dancers. All the other well known artists are either Russian or pretended to be, but Miss St. Denis and Mr. Shawn are real Americans and proud to be such. They are wonderful." And here they both stopped and sighed for a moment.

Everyone, of course, will be no end interested to hear that the Misses Braggiotti are to be in charge of the Boston branch of (between the Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn school of dancing which will be opened November 1. The teaching however will not interfere with other professional engagements, of which quite a few have already been booked for the coming season.

"Yes," agreed Francesca, flashing her teeth in a brilliant smile (she has a beautiful white teeth—"we are going to be very busy this Winter. But then we are always busy at something."

And knowing full well how busy they had done so make a list of last year's Orient Club shows "Nan and Theo" and of now many times they had fought over the script, studio I guess Betty Alden got by the cook in a series of the executive committee of the Vincent Club.

The first of the dances which the Misses Braggiotti have given at Keith's is their Reapers Dance, a symbolic affair in which they portray the wavering moods of persons at wing in the fields. Then Francesca will do her Dutch character dance. Frances will [illegible] a burst of [illegible]. Then will be followed by an artistic conception by Berthe known as her Spirit Dance in which she, as the spirit of the vine, comes to life and dances herself in silence and then passes her position as spirit of the vine. Their performance will conclude with their Parisienne Tango. The costumes of this latter are those thought over from Rome, and are the ones regularly worn by the natives for this dance.

Talk about "living the home" stuff—the Braggiotti sisters are living the home stuff—the Misses Braggiotti do not appear to be playing "at home." An Italian gambling game similar to our "African golf" and said to be every bit as exciting.

In the meantime all the fashionable friends of Berthe and Francesca are wishing them no end of success in their career, and unless I am greatly mistaken, quite a few persons from society will make their way to Keith's the first week during the Braggiotti sisters stay there.

I HEAR that Mrs. Hamilton Perkins (Elizabeth Bliss) and Mr. and Mrs. Chester W. Bliss of Commonwealth avenue have taken a house for the Winter at Santa Barbara, Cal. They plan to leave Boston for the coast on November 9.

Speaking of the Blisses reminds me that their daughter Mrs. Amory S. Carhart (Isabel Bliss) is one of the most prominent matrons of the younger married set in Tuxedo Park. She

"PRAYING COLONELS" ARRIVE TODAY FOR CRIMSON BATTLE

PICTURESQUE PLAYERS READY FOR HARVARD

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Those picturesque troubadours from Centre College, yclept the "Praying Colonels," breeze into town today.

They are a determined outfit this Fall if reports from Danville are to be believed. They have gathered the idea that a defeat at the hands of the Crimson means they pass from the local picture and thus lose the annual mass of publicity that has been coming their way ever since they first trotted out upon the Stadium's chalk-marked lawn two years ago. And they don't want to lose that valuable advertising and all it means to them individually and to the one time unknown college they represent.

There is exactly one way Centre may retain its place on the Crimson schedule, just one way it can continue writing glowing advertisements on Harvard stationery, and that is by pinning a defeat on the Fishermen Saturday afternoon.

Quite naturally the Colonels will strive to do that very thing and in the striving they will have the leather-lunged support of perhaps a greater portion of the Stadium gathering than will cheer for Harvard.

Not since the days of the old Carlisle Indian teams has a foreign foe come to Cambridge won such hosts of local supporters as has the team from the Blue Grass country. Hereabouts everybody knows the Centre players by their first names, which is more than can be said of their familiarity with Harvard monikers and all a few of the former have learned the Centre cheers, or have listened to tales of the town by hurried men the Harvard rooters that will sweep from the Stadium stands on Saturday afternoon.

Every Seat and All the Standing Area Will Be Taken

That every seat and all the standing areas of the Harvard horseshoe will be occupied is certain. $1,600 or more has been posted for the two and one-half hours of the Harvard-Centre game, which is more than can be said of the game's popularity with Harvard money and that is why the Crimson players have learned the Centre cheers, or have listened to tales of the town by hurried men the Harvard rooters that will sweep from the Stadium stands on Saturday afternoon.

Harvard-Centre Game Will Start at 2:30 P. M.

The Harvard-Centre football game, in the Stadium on Saturday, will start at 2:30 P. M. Please note the time, if you have tickets or hope to get tickets or plan to get any. If you have any expectation of seeing the classic remember that the game will begin at half past two and NOT at three. Last year the game did not start until three o'clock and in consequence the Stadium was shrouded in darkness before the final whistle was blown.

Of the coin they lost the year previous.

This year might have seen another fifties of Kentucky backers, but the absence of "Bo" McMillin from the Centre lineup and the fact that Dayton kept the Colonels on the run last Saturday took the pep from their enthusiasm.

Harvard coaches, however, expect to find the team every bit as good as last year, if not better, and are not overlooking anything to insure a Harvard victory.

B. C. GRID SQUAD OFF TO BATTLE DETROIT

The Boston College football squad left for Detroit at the Wolverine express at 2:10 this afternoon. Twenty-eight men formed the Eagle flying squadron that hopes to down Detroit University and take revenge for the defeat suffered last Fall.

Every day since the Fordham game, Coach Cavanaugh has spent every available minute, of daylight, in drilling his men for the contest, which will be one of the hardest the Eagle will play.

The B. C. players are confident that they can triumph over the Red and White eleven, and will enter the game with the same spirit that carried the Maroon and Gold colors to championship heights in 1929.

Against Detroit, the B. C. team will employ a series of new plays, perfected by long practice, that should enable the Heights eleven to return triumphant. Unless fortune completely ignores Cavanaugh's men, there is no reason why Detroit should not be defeated.

Although the Detroit team is apparently as strong as it was last Fall, the Boston College eleven is more equal to the task of winning now than it was a year ago. An entirely new backfield, better in every way than that of last year, will be pitted against the heavy Detroit line.

Detroit Regards Darling as Most Dangerous Eagle

Chuck Darling's fame has spread before him to Detroit and he is regarded as the most dangerous man on the Boston College eleven. Due to injuries received in the Fordham game last Fall Darling was unable to play against Detroit. His presence in the game this year means that B. C. will have a runner, kicker and passer who will be a constant threat to the opponent.

The Minnesota blonde will direct the plays of the Eagle team, and his generalship in the game will be ready played proves that he lacks none of the qualifications for the job he holds.

In addition to Darling, Detroit will meet for the first time, the premier pair of halfbacks, Ward and Cronin. Both men are powerful line plungers and adept ground gainers.

Jack Murphy has returned from his injuries of the U. of Fordham games and promises to give a good account of himself. Jack plays the game as if his life depended on it. In getting down under punts, Murphy is as fast as Conover, Fall and usually arrives with the ball.

Saturday Will Be Detroit's Biggest Football Day of Year

Out in Detroit, Saturday will be the biggest football day of the year. The Detroit-B. C. game will smash the formal opening of the new U. of D. stadium. The stadium has a seating capacity of 44,000, and more than half this number is expected to witness the contest between the two Jesuit colleges.

Coach Duffy regards the game with Boston College as the most important on the schedule. All the games his team has played thus far were but as preliminary skirmishes before the big battle.

MUSIC MEN SCORE HITS ON ALLEYS

Leslie R. Birnie.

The Boston Music publishers have formed a bowling league and to date have been rolling the pins in fine fashion. The Arthur Ryan Company has a strong team in Arthur Ryan, Leonard, John Gibbon, John Tinkin, Captain Leslie Birnie and Hill. Ryan is the ace of the team.

SAILOR BYRON IS BUSY TRAINING

Mike Criss was a caller today. He informed the sporting department that Sailor Byron was busy training for his ten-round bout with Jimmy Pruett, New England lightweight champion, which will be staged at Worcester Monday night.

Sailor Byron

Byron recently gave Johnny Shugrue a tough quarrel at Worcester. The Criss entry figures he carries enough guns to win over Pruett. We shall see.

LOUIS FIRPO HOT AFTER DEMPSEY

Business is picking up for Jack Dempsey.

Louis Firpo.

Louis Firpo, Argentine heavyweight who knocked Jim Tracey the other day, now wants to take a shot at "Tiger Jack."

Firpo is, indeed, a brave youth.

Of course Dempsey will not have any objection to such a match, but we even tolerate a trip to Argentine is assuring the world that he is a better fighting man than Firpo.

Battling Siki, Louis Firpo and Harry Wills should help to make 1928 a very pleasant year for America's wonder man.

SIMON PURES IN RING TONIGHT

Amateur mitt wielders will be in the glare of the flatic spotlight tonight when the biggest amateur boxing tournament of the year is held at Commercial Hall, Bowdoin square, under the direction of the St. Joseph's T. A. S.

Every amateur boxer of prominence is entered for the tourney while the demand for seats is so large that it is predicted that a bumper crowd will be on hand.

Five classes will be held tonight and the winner of each class will be selected to represent Boston in the tourney with New York at the Boston Arena, November 3.

The classes include 118, 118, 126, 135 and 160. It will be the first appearance of the 160 pound boys this season. All the old favorites are entered.

THREE FINISH POUTS AT MAT SHOW NOV. 1

Promoter George Tuohey will hold his first wrestling carnival of the season on November 1, in Mechanics Building, with three finish matches on the card.

The event will mark the initial appearance here of Cliff Binkley, the western star who wrestled "Strong Boy" Lewis to a draw at Tulsa, Okla., in July.

Binkley will show in the main event against one of the Big Four, available on that night.

Frank Jedlicki, who made a great record under the name of Frank Judson in the tournament at Mexico City last Summer, will wrestle in the semi final.

BASKETBALL LEAGUE FORMED BY SCHOOLS

March 9—Lexington at North Andover.

GLOUCESTER DEFEATS MANCHESTER ELEVEN

Gloucester, Oct. 19.—Gloucester High defeated the Manchester team here yesterday afternoon before a good crowd, 7-0. The fishermen played a good defensive game and pulled many brilliant plays, which resulted in large gains by Brown and Wayncot. They carried the ball to the five-yard line and McLean took it over. Captain Kelley of Gloucester played a fine defensive game.

Speculators Claim to Have Tickets for Game

Whither thou goest I shall go also.

The ticket speculator may not have any knowledge of Scripture nor of what Ruth is purported to have said to Naomi, but he has that idea in his mind for he keeps step with prospective buyers of Harvard-Centre game tickets.

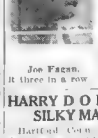
The speculator is on the job all the time and he is right out in full and front view of everybody. He keeps step with anybody at Harvard square, or at any of the stores where the pasteboards for the Crimson-Praying Colonels' contest may be and he will tell prospective buyers that he has them to sell and he will also buy them.

The specs have seats in the wooden stands.

And but for the men who speculate in tickets the ordinary football fan would have had a much better chance to get better seats.

JOE EAGAN IS TO RETURN TO HUB

Joe Eagan will be back in the Hub within ten days, according to word received from him by Louis Block.



Joe Eagan.

Eagan has won eleven straight fights on the coast.

Block is sure going for Bryan Downey or Johnny Wilson. He is planning a big campaign for Eagan when he returns. Eagan has two decisions over Downey to his credit and now Block says Eagan is waiting to make it three in a row.

HARRY D O RACES SILKY MAC AT AVON

Hartford Conn. Oct. 19—Yesterday's racing at Charter Oak Park, Avon, was of the very best. The 2:12 Pace was the day's feature. Harry D O and Silky Mac will settle the matter today. Each won two heats before darkness fell, and a thriller.

Admiral Harris grabbed first money in the 2:10 Trot. He defeated some good ones in fast miles. Peter Griffith delivered in the 2:24 Pace, although five heats were necessary before the son of Peter Wood came through.

Today's card reads as follows: 2:30 and 2:13 trotting classes and 2:16 Pace.

The wrestling club of the B. Y. M. C. Union announce an entertainment in the Union Hall tonight under the auspices of the Union Hostess Room.

TUNNEY SIGNS TO BATTLE WIGGINS

Gene Tunney, former lightweight champion of the world, and "Chuck" Wiggins of Indianapolis, will clash at Mechanics Building Friday night, December 27, for the Commercial A. A. This announcement confirms the story printed in the Boston American a week ago.

Local fans are anxious to see how fares here in Tunney and Wiggins. The Commercial Club is bringing here two of the best known lightheavyweights in the country.

Wiggins is anxious to become known in the East. In fact only a couple of weeks ago he posted $2,500 with the New York Boxing Commission for a bout with Harry Greb for the title, but Greb has turned a deaf ear to the plea of the Westerner.

Greb and Wiggins already have met six times and Greb never has been able to do much with the Western boxer. In fact Greb asked for an exorbitant guarantee to come here to meet Wiggins. Wiggins has met every light heavyweight of note in the country. Greb Tom Gibbons, Mike Gibbons, Happy Littleton, Fay Keiser, Martin Burke and others have been on his calling list.

RED CHAPMAN IS WINNER IN RING

Red Chapman has made good as a boxer away from home. At Newark, N. J., Monday night, Chapman defeated Jimmy Fresada in a ten round bout. The Dorchester youth, battling under the direction of Charley Cardio, scored so big that he was immediately signed to mingle with Spencer Gardner at Newark next Monday night.

Red Chapman.

Being a heavy hitter and a consistent Chapman is a great audience pleaser. And that's what counts.

TUFTS AND HARVARD HARRIERS WILL RACE

Tufts cross-country team will meet the Harvard hill and dalers on the Belmont course. John Doherty, last year's Tufts captain, and his brother, Joe, George Waskovitz, Orrin MacCorkle, Jim Murray, Bob Fuller and Eddie Reese the Trinidad Panamathoner, are all letter men out for the Tufts team.

Manager Ted Rickford has arranged a schedule of five meets for Tufts as follows

Oct. 21 at Springfield Y.M.C.A.
Nov. 4, New Hampshire State at Durham.
Nov. 11, Wesleyan at Middletown.
Nov. 18 Intercollegiates.

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

See This Romance of Princess Mary Tudor Starring Marion Davies in Super-Motion Pictures Which Are to Appear at the Park Theatre, October 26

Mary (Marion Davies) makes a bitter enemy of the Duke of Buckingham by asking Brandon to lead the dance with her.

World-Famous Story of the All-Conquering Power of Love Over the Heart of the Wilful and Beautiful Sister of the Autocratic King Henry VIII.

The famous story has been created into a superlative photoplay by Cosmopolitan Productions, direction of Robert G. Vignola. It is released as a Paramount picture.

By Charles Major

THE princess looked at us with a half-pout, half-frown, and remarked: "Now you double-dyed traitors yourselves very brunant and witty."

"Yes," returned Jane maliciously, nodding her head in emphatic assent, as the princess and Brandon rose on before us.

"I hope she is satisfied now," said Jane sotto voce to me.

"So you want me to ride with you?" I replied.

"Yes," nodded Jane.

"Why?" I asked.

"Because I want you to," was the enlightening response.

"Then why did you not dance with me the other evening?"

"Because I did not want to."

"Short but comprehensive," thought I, but a sufficient reason for a maiden.

I said nothing however and after a time Jane spoke. The name was one thing and the thing was another. I did not want to dance with you, but I do wish to ride with you. You are the only gentleman to whom I would have said what I did about my garth being sore. As to the new dance, I do not care to learn it because I would not dance it with any man but you, and not even with you—yet." This made me glad, and coming from coy modest Jane meant a great deal. It meant that she cared for me, and would, some day, be mine, but it also meant that she would take her own time and her own sweet way in bringing me. This was comforting, if not satisfying, and loosened my tongue. "Jane, you know my heart is full of love for you—"

"Will the universe crumble!" she cried with the most provoking little laugh. Now that sentence was my fork sliced, whenever I tried to give Jane some idea of the state of my affections. It was a part of the speech which I had prepared and delivered to Mary in Jane's hearing, as you already know. I had said to the princess: "The universe will crumble and the heavens roll up as a scroll ere my love shall alter or pale." It was a high-sounding sentence, but it was not true, as I was forced to admit, almost with the same breath that spoke it. Jane had heard it, and had carried it away in that memory of hers, so tenacious in holding everything it should forget. It is wonderful what a fund of useless information some persons accumulate and cling to with a persistent determination worthy of a better cause. I thought Jane never would forget that unfortunate simile, sentence spoken as grand loquently to Mary. I wonder what she would have thought had she known that I had said substantially the same thing to a dozen of others. I never should have won her in that case. She does not know it yet, and never shall if I can prevent it. Although dear Jane is old now, and the rose on her cheeks have long since paled, her gray eyes are still there with their pinch-of-snuff twinkle upon occasion, and—in fact Jane can be as provoking as ever when she takes the fancy, for she is as sure of my affection now as upon the morning of that race ride to Windsor. Aye, surer, since she knows that in all these years I have changed only to grow greater and stronger and truer in the fru-fru-ing light of her sweet face and the purifying influence of her pure soul. What a blessed thing it is for a man to love his wife and be satisfied with her, and to think her the fairest being in all the world, and how thrice happy is he who can stretch out the sweetest season of his existence, the days of triumphant courtship through the flying years of all his life, and then lie down to die in the quiet embrace of a true love.

So I re-balled my effort to pour out my heart as she always did. "Jane is something that greatly troubles me," she said.

"What is it?" I asked in some concern.

"My mistress," she answered roll ing in the direction of the two riding ahead of us. "I never saw her so much interested in any one as she is in your friend, Master Brandon. Not that she is really in love with him as yet perhaps, but I fear it is coming and I dread to see it. She has never been compelled to forego anything she want ed, and her desires are always imperative. They drive her and she is helpless against them. She would not and could not make the slightest effort to overcome them. I think it never occurred to her that such a thing could be or necessary, everything she wants she naturally thinks is here by divine right. There has been no great need of such an effort until now but your friend Brandon presents it. I wish he were at the other side of the world. I think she feels that she ought to keep away from him before it is too late both for his sake and her own, but she is powerless to deny herself the pleasure of being with him and I do not know what is to come of it all. That incident of the loose garth is an illustration. Did you ever know anything so bold and transparent? Any one could see through it and the worst of all is she seems not to care. Every one does see. Now look at them ahead of us. No girl is so happy riding beside a man unless she is interested in him. She was dull enough until he joined her. He seemed in no hurry to come, so she resorted to the flimsy excuse of the loose garth to bring him. I am surprised that she even sought the shadow of an excuse, but did not order him forward without any pretense of one. He knows me greatly to you know the state of my feelings."

"No," I answered, "but I think he knows what he can and what he can't do with the King's sister, and I really believe he will keep his heart and head, even at that dizzy height. He is a cool fellow, if there ever was one."

"He certainly is different from other men," returned Jane. "I think he has never spoken a word of love to her. He has said some pretty things, which she has repeated to me, has mortified to some extent, and has actually told her of some of her faults. I should like to see anyone else take that liberty. She seems to like it from him, and says he inspires her with higher, better motives and a yearning to be good, but I am sure he has made no love to her."

"Perhaps it would be better if he did. It might cure her," I replied.

"Oh! no! no! not now! at first perhaps, but not now. What I fear is that if he remains a little much longer she will take matters in hand and speak herself. I hate to say that it does sound well—but she is a princess, and it would be different with her from what it would be with an ordinary girl, she might have to speak first or three months or something from now. [illegible] the proposal to, for [illegible] Whose emotions [illegible] her so rich never forego so great a thing as the man she loves, only for the want of a word or two."

Then it was that Jane told me of the scene with the page of the night before, whispered confidences, [illegible] pillows and a hundred other straws that showed more than plainly which way the wind of [illegible] winds was blowing with regard to [illegible] anyone. Now who could have foretold that it was even enough to produce that Brandon would learn to love Mary across a page's [illegible] and across the resentment as an [illegible] had done. But that Mary should love Brandon and he a [illegible] whose [illegible] was an [illegible] for event—one that would hardly have been predicted by the shrewdest prophet.

What Lady Jane said troubled me grievously, as it was but the confirmation of my own fears. My opportunity to know was far better than his, but I had seen enough to set me thinking.

Brandon I believe, saw nothing of Mary's growing partiality at first. He could not help but find her wonderfully attractive and interesting, and perhaps it needed only the thought that she might love him, to kindle a flame in his own breast. But at the time of our ride to Windsor, Charles Brandon was not in love with Mary Tudor nor ever near it. He may unconsciously have been. He would what and sing and was as light hearted as a lark—I can when away from the presence as well as with her—and that does not go with heart full of heavy love of impossible fate, love such as his would have been for the first princess of the first blood royal of the world.

But another trouble could not [illegible] the sunlight in my own heart, and that rode to Windsor was the happiest day of my life up to that time. Even Jane there [illegible] I should our foreboding [illegible] and started out laughing like the creature of joy and gladness she was. Now and then my heart would swell up so full of it I could not help but [illegible] birds in the hedge are and of the [illegible] with the noise of the air as I whipped past them. Long their pillows and a hundred other straws that showed more than plainly which way the wind of [illegible] winds was blowing with regard to [illegible] anyone. SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre At Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaky, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of [illegible] ingredients. Thousands of folks [illegible] a [illegible] time-saving [illegible] [illegible] besides no one can possibly [illegible] it darkens so naturally and evenly that no one can [illegible] you've [illegible] it. Geography in Names

CURRANTS get their name from the fact that originally they were made from small grapes grown near Corinth, Greece, and called Corinthians. Cherries came from Cerasus and chestnuts from Castana, both cities of the past.

MAN AND MAID — By Elinor Glyn

Latest and Best Novel by the Noted Author of "Three Weeks," "Family" and Other Great Stories

By Elinor Glyn

WHAT is at the back of Alathea's mind? I do not know. That resentment and dislike of me has only become crystallized since the Suzette affair. I am sure she thinks that Suzette is my mistress still, and it's a insultes her, but she reasons that with the bargain as it is, she has not the smallest right to object. She is furious with herself to think that it should matter to her. That is a thought! Why indeed should it matter if she is utterly indifferent to me? Is it possible? Can it be that? No—I dare not think of it, in any case it will be the most thrilling situation since she is my wife.

I believe it would be wisest for me not to go to the Duchesse's but simply to write her a note telling her of my news, then anything she may tell me will be gratuitous.

I had just finished doing this when once again a letter was brought in from that lady, and this time it was to thank me for my cheque, and to tell me that it had been the means of preventing a most disagreeable scandal by bringing peace to a family!

Sardonic mirth overcame me. So three separate people seem to be under the impression that they have paid to a gambler's debts! Each apparently unaware that there was anyone else in the running. It looks as if "Bobby" had worked the lot! Does Alathea know, and is this the extra cause of her worry?

I sent my note back by the Duchesse's messenger, who still waited and went to my luncheon.

In about an hour the telephone rang—a request from the Hotel de Courville that I should repair there immed ately, without fail.

"Her Grace spoke herself," Burton said," and said that it was most important Sir Nicholas."

"Very well, order the carriage."

"Yes, sir." Burton did you congratulate Miss Sharp?"

Burton coughed.

"I did make so bold Sir Nicholas, as to tell the young lady how glad I was, but she took it queer like, she d tened up and said it was not a business agreement,

What Has Gone Before

Sir Nicholas Thormonde, a wealthy Englishman, wounded and blinded in one eye in action, starts writing his diary up Paris while the war is still on. He is sick of life. The war has robbed it of all that a young man can find of joy. He tries to amuse himself in the company of several women friends, who, he feels, seek his company for his money and not for the love he craves. He starts to write a book and hires a typist, Miss Sharp. He falls in love with her and serves notice on the "Fluffies." She refuses to give him her address. Nicholas asks her to marry him as a business proposition. She consents. Nicholas arranges to help her family out of debt at great expense.

to be able to write your letters and do your work without people talking about it. That one found funny to me, so I said nothing more."

"Burton, it is funny for this moment. Miss Sharp is only marrying me for some reason for her family, the same one which forces her to work, but I hope I can make her think differently about it some day."

"Pardon the liberty I am taking, Sir Nicholas, but perhaps she don't like the idea of Mam'selle, and don't know she's gone for good."

"That is probably the case."

Burton's face lit up at the expressed complete understanding, as he left the room, and presently I was on my way to the Hotel de Courville, a sense of exhilaration and of excitement and joy in my heart!

The Duchesse was playing impatiently with her cigarette when I was announced by the servant of ninety. Her face expressed some strong feeling. I was not sure it was tinged with displeasure or not. She helped me to sit down, and then she began at once.

"N'cholas, explain yourself. You tell me you are engaged to your secretary. So this has been going on all the time and you have not told me I, who was your mother's oldest friend?"

"Dear Duchesse, you are mistaken h has just been settled. No one was more surprised at my offer than Miss Sharp herself."

"You know her real name, N'cholas? And her family history? You have guessed, of course, from my asking you for the twenty-five thousand francs, that they were in some difficulty?"

I reached forward, took the Duchess'. hand and kissed it.

"Yes, I know Alathea is the daughter of the Honorable Robert and Lady Hilda Bulteel."

"She has told you all of the story, perhaps?—but you cannot know what the money was for, because the poor child does not know it herself. It is more just that I should inform you, since you are going to marry into the family."

"Thank you, Duchesse."

She then began, and gave me a picture of her old friendship with Lady Hilda, and of the dreadful calamity which had befallen in her going off with Bobby Bulteel.

"It was one of those cases of mad love, Nicholas, which fortunately seems to have died out of the modern world, though for the truth I must say that one more sedulsant than ce Joli Bulteel I have never met! One could not, of course, acknowledge them for a crime like that, but I have ever been fond of poor Hilda and that sweet child.

"She was born here, in this hotel. Poor Hilda came to me in her great trouble and I was in deep mourning myself then for my husband — the house is large, and it could all pass quietly."

I received forward and took the Duchesse's hand and kissed it, and she went on:

"Alathea is my godchild; one of my names is Alathea. The poor little one, she adored her father, in all those first years. They wandered much and only came to Paris at intervals, and each time they came a little poorer, a little more troubled, and then after a lapse I heard those two were born at Nice — wretched little decadents, when my poor Hilda was a mass of nerves and disillusion. Alathea was eleven then. It was, par-hazard, when she was about fourteen that she heard of her father's crime. She was the gayest, most sweet child before that, through all their poverty, but from that moment her character changed. It destroyed something in her spirit, one must believe. She set firmly to education, decided she would be a secretary, cultivated herself, and worked, worked! She worshipped her mother, and resented immensely her father's treatment of her."

"She must always have had a wonderful character."

"For that, yes," and the Duchesse paused a moment, then went on:

"Quite a tremendous character, and as Bobby sank and poor Hilda became more ill, and wretched, that child has risen in strength, and supported them all. Since the war came they have almost lived upon her earnings. The father is without conscience, and of a selfishness amazing, quite. His money all went to him, for his use, and Alathea was left to supplement the mother's wretched two or three thousand francs a year. And how that brute has again cheated at card-, and poor Hilda came to me in her great distress, and remembering your words, N'cholas, I called upon you. It would have been too cruel for the poor woman to have to suffer again. Hilda took the money and gave it to this inhumane husband, and the affair was settled that night. Alathea knows nothing about it."

Light was dawning upon me. The admirable Bobby has evidently played upon the feelings of both wife and daughter!

"Duchesse, why did you not wish me to know the real name, and would not help me at all about 'Miss Sharp'—won't you now tell me your reason?"

The Duchesse shaded her eyes from the fire with a hand-screen, and it came between us, and I could not see her face, but her voice changed.

"I was greatly surprised to find the girl in your flat one day. I had not understood with whom she was working. I was not pressed about it, frankly, Nicholas, because one cannot help knowing of your existence and your friends and I feared your interest for a secretary might be as for them, and I disliked that my godchild should run such a risk. When Jeunes filles of the world have to take up menial positions they are of course open to such situations, and have to expect difficulties. I wished to protect her as well as I could."

Suddenly I saw myself, and the utterly rotten life I had led, that this, my old friend, even, could not be sure of my chivalry. I loathed the lax, cheap honor of the world and its hypocrisy. I could not even be indignant with the Duchesse, judging me from that standpoint. She was right, but I did tell her that men had a slightly different angle in looking upon such things in England, where women worked, and were respected in all classes, and that the idea of making love to any secretary would never have entered my head. It was the intelligence and the dignity of Alathea herself which had made me desire her for a companion.

"It is well that you are English, Nicholas. No Frenchman of family could have married the daughter of a man who had cheated at cards."

"Even if the girl was good and splendid like Alathea, Duchesse?"

"For that, no, my son: we have little left but our traditions and our names, and those things matter to us. No, frankly, I could not have permitted the union had you been my son."

So I had been right in my analysis of what would be the bent of my old friend's mind.

"You are pleased now, though, dear Duchesse?" I pleaded.

"It seems impossible from my point and I would not have encouraged it, but since it is done I can but wish my dear Alathea and you, my dear boy, true happiness."

Again I took and kissed her kind hand.

"In England, especially in this war time, questions are not asked, or not pressed. She can be 'Sharp' simply and not Bulteel, then it may pass.

For the girl herself, you have a rare jewel, N'cholas—unselfish, devoted, true, but the will of the devil! You shall not be able to turn her as you wish if you believe in the other way!"

"Duchesse, the situation is peculiar, there is no question of love in it. Alathea is marrying me merely that she may give money to her family. I am marrying that I may have a secretary without scandal. We are not going to be really husband and wife."

The Duchesse dropped her fire-screen, her clever eyes were wh mical and sparkling.

"Fool!" she said, and never has the delicious word conveyed so much meaning—"You believe that truly, Nicholas? Alathea is a very pretty girl when properly dressed—"

"And without glasses?"

"As you say, without glasses, which I hear cover her fine eyes when in your society!"

"I asked her to marry me under those terms, and it was only upon those terms she accepted me."

The Duchesse laughed.

"A nice romance! Well, my son, I wish you joy!"

"Duchesse," and I leaned forward "do you really think I can make her love me? Am I too awful? Is there a chance?"

The Duchesse patted my arm and her face shone with kindliness.

"Of course, foolish boy!" And she broke into French. No Frenchman of family could have married the daughter of a man who had cheated at cards."

"Even if the girl was good and splendid like Alathea, Duchesse?"

"For that, no, my son: we have little left but our traditions and our names, and those things matter to us. No, frankly, I could not have permitted the union had you been my son."

So I had been right in my analysis of what would be the bent of my old friend's mind.

Your Money Back If It Fails

Nothing is so utterly needless as the suffering from aching, painful corns.

It is as easy to peel off a corn as to skin a banana. Touch it with "Ges-It" and the trick is done. For hard corns, soft corns, old corns, new corns, any corn or callus. All pain stops instantly and the corn presently loosens, and soon can be lifted right off root and all with the fingers.

Your money cheerfully refunded if it fails. But it never fails. Costs but a trifle. E. Lawrence & Co., Mfr., Chicago

Why Have a Sour Stomach

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets After Meals Insure a Sweet Stomach And All Dyspeptic Distresses.

You have probably been through the experience where your stomach went sour and filled with gas and nothing at hand to give relief. And after two or three days you got over it. It took that time for the stomach to right itself naturally. But why go through such misery? If you chew one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after eating you can have pie and cheese, onions, fried foods, baked beans, and you tried potato, sausage, and so on for your three meals a day and not have a sour stomach with gas, belching, fullness, pressure and the misery that comes from an acid stomach due to indigestion. The reason is that these tablets supply the stomach with an alkaline effect that neutralizes the acid, hence the stomach becomes calm and sweet. If you fear you are a chronic dyspeptic and are afraid to eat, get a 50 cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any druggist and eat back into your eating strike.

Household Hints

Many reversible carpets are spoiled by black lines on the side laid next to the floor. These are caused by dust working up between boards that do not fit very well. It felt cannot be afforded a good plan is to fill the spaces between the boards with paper which has been soaked in water and then worked up into a soft pulp. When he pulp is dry in the crevices over the floor with either brown paper or newspapers doubled, as this entirely prevents those disfiguring lines which often make it impossible to reverse a carpet.

Never cook stews too fast or the meat will become hard and tough.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

James J. Hill once said to me: "It's dangerous to start half way up the ladder and not at the bottom, because if you started half way up and made a slip you would get a very nasty fall—perhaps a fatal fall."

Yesterday's column showed that only one of our twenty leading railroads today has the same president as it had in 1905 and that twelve of the twenty presidents of today have won their positions since 1915.

A promise was made to tell something of the humble start of our foremost railroad executives of today.

Fred D. Underwood, head of the Erie, is the only man who has held a railroad presidency for seventeen years. He received his first railway experience wrestling with a brake, in the days before George Westinghouse made braking easy by harnessing compressed air to do the work formerly done by the muscles of the fireman. He had to do his climbing one step at a time.

The president of our largest railroad, Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania, had engineering training and started as a rodman.

One of the ablest and most forceful railroad executives in America today is Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio, who became one of James J. Hill's "boys." But not until he had, at the cost of much sweat, made his mark in subordinate positions. Mr. Willard's first job was firing a locomotive when wood, not coal, was the fuel used. That, as you can readily imagine, was no sinecure. He migrated from New England westward and went through the hards.

If you were to stage a series of boxing bouts among America's railway presidents the champion ship belt would probably be won by Al Smith, head of the entire New York Central system.

Smith had a collar and cuff job to start with; he was a railway office boy. He was fearless and he reasoned that the best school for learning railroading was not in an office, but out on the road.

The white hand and the soft muscles by and by became tanned and before long Smith could lick any fellow in the bunch. With the result that in time he was the best man in a gang. From then on he was moved from one job to another. He gradually earned a reputation for being able to straighten out tangles, wrecks, etc., quicker than any other man on the line. That reputation he has maintained and increased to this day.

* * *

Fisk Rubber.

To M. R., Canton.—Herewith is condensed analysis you request on Fisk Rubber. Speculative rubber and tire shares. Occasional pick-up movements. Management satisfactory. Financial position satisfactory. Outstanding 143,040 shares of no par value, junior to $2,125,000 second preferred, $18,951,500 first preferred, $1,500,000 bonds. Asset value $19 a share. Current assets, $27,910,422, including $11,096,000 accounts and notes receivable, $3,682,000 cash, $13,131,000 inventory, nearly twice but smaller than at close of 1921. Current liabilities, $9,737,418, including $7,946,000 notes payable, $2,000,000 accounts payable, $255,000 accruals. Net working capital, $18,172,-004. Surplus, $2,843,061. Reserves, $7,757,729. Dividend none. First preferred payment passed July, 1921. Resumption depends on improvement in business conditions.

General Electric Debentures.

To W. R. T., Cambridge.—Total funded indebtedness of General Electric is $38,278,126, of which about $4,868,000 consists of employees' investment bonds. The remainder is in three issues of debentures, the three issues are in $500 to $1,000 pieces, the 4s, 1940, and 3½s, 1942, being in $100 denomination as well. The 4s afford the highest yield, 5.01 per cent, whereas the 3½s yield 5.01 per cent. Interest on them is payable February and August.

The 5s yield 5.04 per cent, interest March and September. The big factor making the company's debentures high grade is its earning record. For ten years earnings averaged eighteen times interest charges and it was one of the few companies which reported greater earnings in 1921 than 1920.

Doheny Oils, Steels and Rails Active in Irregular Trading on Big Exchange

CORN PRODUCTS AT RECORD FOR ALL TIME

Rails, steels and Doheny oils all figured largely in activities of irregular trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Call money renewed at 5 and dropped to 4½ per cent.

Execution of large buying orders in the railroad section carried Chesapeake & Ohio, New York Central, New Haven, Norfolk & Western, Northern Pacific, Reading, Atlantic Coast Line, Great Northern preferred, Lehigh Valley and Canadian Pacific from 1 to 6 points beyond Wednesday's final figures.

Quite a number of shares mounted to new high prices for the year, including Corn Products, which gained 6 points to a record, and Manhattan Shirt, which gained 7½ points.

Burns Brothers was up 5¾, General American Tank 5, and American Car and Foundry and Locomotive Works were also 4 points higher.

American Locomotive, Electric Storage Battery, Kayser, Reynolds Tobacco, Continental Can, Peoples Gas, Consolidated Gas and Columbia Gas scored substantial advances.

Both Mexican Petroleum and Standard Oil of New Jersey fluctuated while Studebaker, Republic Steel and Pacific Oil encountered intermittent selling.

Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. statement for quarter ended June 30 shows net after preferred dividends of $299,786, equal to four cents a share on 825,770,250 common, was poorer than generally expected. The stock declined more than 2 points on news.

You Can't Teach Horses

Something About Drugs and Drink

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

You can teach men, not horses, or rather men can teach themselves and horses can't. That's why horses remain horses and men go forward. A few years ago horses were afraid of automobiles, afraid of steam cars. They pay no attention to them now. And when Mr. William Meehan recently rode from Indianapolis to Chicago in an old-fashioned, high-wheeled bicycle the horses that wouldn't have noticed him in a roaring, blazing automobile attempted to climb the trees.

Once upon a time you could say that alcohol was worse than tobacco, drugs infinitely worse than alcohol. Now between alcohol and drugs there is little choice.

Robert Burns, having taken too much cocaine, undressed himself in the street and proceeded to show how easy it was to thave perfectly with a piece of broken glass. He went to the hospital.

Daniel Ury bought home-made whiskey and devoted himself to it from 9 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon. Then he became absolutely blind. He went to the hospital, will never recover his sight, probably will die.

It is announced that Pittsburgh contains 5,000 drug addicts. Unfortunately for the drug victims their case is hopeless in at least ninety times out of a hundred. A victim of alcohol may swear off and become sober. The victim of drugs rarely conquers himself.

A New Name, "Teparia"

Ingeniously Constructed, but It Won't Rule

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Mr. Farnese of Bush street, San Francisco, invites your attention to the future ruling power of the earth. Its name is "Teparia." Christianity and civilization reached their end in 1914, says Mr. Farnese, and a new power is to arise, coming from Asia, its name made up of the first letters in each of the following: "Turkey, Egypt, Persia, Arabia, Russia, India, Afghanistan."

Mr. Farnese thinks that after "Teparia" begins to rule, the world will return to sun worship.

Mr. Farnese's sad prediction probably won't come true for awhile. Civilization on this earth has hardly been born, Christianity, the real kind, hardly has a start. It would be rather early for both to die. There is more real brain power in the smallest European country than in the whole of Asia, not developed perhaps, but it is there. If Europeans continue robbing and butchering each other they may suffer invasion for awhile. But there won't be any "teparia" in this or the next century.

So Kind, Mr. Lee

But, Since When Are "We" WE?

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

E. J. Lee, very nice, able young man, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, says the workmen's right to strike UST END. Hear him!

"I am not prepared to say that we should go to the length of absolutely FORBIDDING railroad strikes by specific statute."

Very kind of him, but since when are "we" WE?

When the clothing merchant's little clerk remarked, "I think we will have rain," his boss indignantly replied, "Since when are we WE? I will have rain."

"Specific statutes" forbidding railroad men to strike would be interesting with railroad owners constantly adding to transportation charges and crippling the country's business with excessive rates. Railroads, privately owned, exist only thanks to the fact that the Treasury of the United States was thrown open to them. Will they now add the making of "specific statutes" to their free laying of transportation taxes on the public? Quite likely; it's a patient, docile public.

"May I Beat My Wife?"

No, but Once You COULD

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

A colored gentleman from Barbados called at the police station to ask, most solemnly, if he had a right to beat his wife. She didn't have breakfast ready when he returned at 5 in the morning from all night work. The police said: "No, you can't beat your wife no matter WHAT she does." They were horrified at the thought. So are you, so are we.

But until very recently, in civilized England, the law provided that a man might beat his wife with a stick not bigger than his thumb—some English thumbs are thick—and many yet retain their belief in the old saying: "A carpet, a wife, a walnut tree, the more you beat them the better they be."

That Barbados negro is not so very far behind the times.

Our Innocent Government

How Easily It Yields

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

France may not ratify the doings of the Washington conference, may refuse to scrap ships, or limit her freedom of action. Very intelligent, the French government. You can't have as much for this government, which throws away hundreds of millions in ships half finished, makes itself responsible for the possessions and the stealings of other nations in the Pacific, and begins breaking up its ships, not even waiting for others to keep their bargain. Just one thing this nation should say to others coming across the ocean with their conferences: "We don't make war, we are out of trouble, we intend to keep out of trouble. You attend to YOUR business, and we shall attend to OURS."

Latent Power Within Us

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

HERE is the case of two children born of deaf and dumb parents living on a remote Western ranch, where they were rarely visited by talking persons.

Those children, of course, would cry. But it was taken for granted that they, too, were otherwise deaf and dumb like their parents, who taught them the sign language of eyes and fingers.

They had grown to be respectively six and five, when the secluded ranchers were visited by an Eastern aunt whose organs of speech were no mal.

She sang and occasionally uttered words. To her amazement, the children began to imitate the sounds. Naturally, she encouraged them to speak, until they developed quite a vocabulary.

Her visit finished, she took them to her own home, where they learned to talk like other children. For it was found that they had not inherited the defects of their unspeaking parents.

They needed only the right setting, the example of speech and the use of their vocal apparatus in order to become conversational animals like the rest of us.

It is hard to believe that one might have perfect organs of speech, and yet be unable to speak.

But why not? Biblically we are assured that folks may have ears and not hear, have eyes and not see.

That, of course, is deliberate deafness and blindness.

But, though man is distinguished by his acquired habit of conversation from the rest of the animal world that ranges from racket to habitual silence, you may not become a conversational animal using and like speech, if you are not properly environed.

As in the case of the offspring of this deaf-and-dumb couple.

It is a curious little incident and not particularly impressive, except for its symbolic suggestion.

Obviously, it points to the power shut up within each of us and which may remain merely latent and potential, unless discovered, summoned, and used.

What incalculable, inexhaustible radiant energy and power are locked up in the average individual Human Being!

Refused at Hospital

Editor Boston American:

In a North Cambridge rooming house the other day one of the lodgers, an elderly woman who had been an invalid for several years, was taken dangerously ill. Efforts were made to care for her there, but when her temperature reached 104 it was decided to take her to a hospital.

Fellow roomers bundled her up and took her in an automobile to the Cambridge hospital. The automobile was kept waiting outside the hospital for twenty minutes, with the sick woman in a high fever. When inquiry was finally made, her friends were told she would have to be taken to the rear of the hospital to the "Accident Entrance." She was taken there, and carried into the hospital.

Thereupon a woman, who appeared to be in charge, appeared on the scene and demanded to know by whose authority the sick woman had been brought there. She paid no attention to the dying woman, who sat on the sick chair in the hospital corridor. When she was told that the woman had been brought there because it happened to be the dearest hospital she said the patient would not be taken. She was told that refusal to take the patient might cause her death. She replied that the hospital had no more beds. She was told that a bed would be provided and brought to the hospital for the woman.

"I have no time to argue with you," the woman said. "Take her out of here."

It was present when this happened. There were three others present. What this executive of the Cambridge hospital did to a dying woman I wouldn't have done to a sick dog. I think it is criminal to have such creatures in charge of hospitals, where tact, mercy and kindliness are just as necessary as the surgeon's scalpel and the ether.

Employment Offices

Editor Boston American:

Will you please tell me why someone hasn't spoken up before about the grafting employment offices in our city? I am nineteen and out of work, but I would rather starve than go to another one of those places. Getting in line, you finally arrive at the desk behind which some young lady will refer you to another desk, from which you are sent back to the first desk.

If you are lucky enough to get a job you must pay them one week's pay.

A COMMONER.

Help the Children

Editor Boston American:

An appeal for $100,000 additional annual revenue is being made by the Children's Hospital. This is necessary if the present work is to continue, without lowering standards of efficiency. Contributions of whatever size are urgently needed.

GEORGE P. GARDNER,
Treasurer, the Children's Hospital.

THE HELPING HAND

Gets Baby Carriage

Editor Boston American:

Have a baby carriage, and would be pleased to give it to a needy family. MRS. W. B. C.

ED. NOTE—The above carriage has been given to Mrs. B. M.

Stroller Sent

Editor Boston American:

I am writing to know if you have some one who is in a stroller. I have three children, I would greatly appreciate the same.

MRS. M. A. H.

ED. NOTE—The stroller offered by Mrs. H. C. a few days ago has been given to Mrs. M. A. H.

Supplied With Crutches

Editor Boston American:

I have a pair of crutches, which E. P. D. may have for her husband by calling at my address.

A. R.

ED. NOTE—E. P. D. has been given address of A. R. for the crutches.

Thank Our Readers, Not Us

Editor Boston American:

I wrote to the Helping Hand Department for a baby carriage, and you sent me an address of a Mrs. H. of Brookline. Today I received a lovely dark-blue carriage, and I can tell you that I am very grateful to you, and at this time I take the liberty to thank you.

MRS. F. R.

Needs Clothing

Editor Boston American:

I wish some reader would help me. My husband has been out of work for a long while. I have three children, the oldest five, and am expecting the stork any day. I would be very thankful for any old clothing that could be made over, or a carriage, bassinette or crib.

MRS. J. K.

Editor's Note—Many mothers are asking for clothing and blankets as the weather grows colder. Some have been supplied. Will the readers help the others?

Is Only Vileness of Life Real

By Winifred Black

THE pretty girl with the red cheeks and the clear, hazel eyes and the soft bobbed hair nodded vigorously.

"Yes," she said, "that's what I want — reality — grim, hideous, vivid, terrible.

"Old-Fashioned Girl' and 'Under the Lilacs' and the 'Little Curl Series'—they were all right when I was a child, and so were dolls and skipping ropes —but I'm a woman now and I want to read real books, about real life. They don't shock me at all—they fascinate me. They thrill me with the wonder of life and the horror of it and the glory of it.

And she and her young man put up a picnic lunch and went out to the beach and sat in the sand and watched the blue waves curl in, crested creamy white like the lace flounce of a blue dress, and they read together but there in the clean, sweet-smelling open, a Russian book so unspeakably vile that the very sight of it tainted the air like the smell of decaying offal.

And the young man was delighted.

He was a nice man, good as gold, honest, upright, and intelligent. He had lived all his life in a clean, well-ordered home and he wanted to know how people felt who had never been of such a home.

And he respects the girl very much. Sometime I suppose, he and the girl will make up their minds to marry and settle down, though doubtless they do hate the thought of anything so old-fashioned and hopelessly Victorian as marriage.

There are thousands of such young people, talking about just such things together, nowadays —things that were never mentioned in decent society twenty years or even ten or, in most places five years ago.

There's no use being shocked at them—they mean well and they'll come out all right. They're just passing through a phase of development, and they do so want to be adapted and worldly and "knowing."

But somehow I keep wondering—I can't seem to help it—why Pretty Girl and her friends think these gross books are so "gorgeously real."

Isn't the Mother of the Family just as real and just as human and a thousand times more interesting, really, with her homes and her fears and her sacrifices and her little plans and her timid disappointments as some poor drab who sells herself—and then wants to tell the world about it—is a book?

SEEN AND HEARD

STATEMENT by C. L. EDGAR, president of Edison Electric Illuminating Company, that the concern will start work on new generating station at Weymouth, means steady expansion of public utilities from Boston to suburbs, but it will wipe out a picnic ground which was the district's most famous in the old days. Downer's Landing, opposite the Fore River shipbuilding plant, has been acquired by the electric company.

J. HENRY LARKIN may part his name in the middle, but don't presume upon that fact and try to tell him that the schooner Mayflower is a yacht. J. HENRY is skipper of the Mayflower, has a large share of his savings invested in her, earns his living fishing in her, and he is as sunburned, two-fisted, hard-toiled and red-blooded a fishing skipper as you'll meet in a month of Sundays.

FRED A. LUNDBERG, for many years an immigrant inspector at Boston, is now a telephone magnate. He has recently purchased a telephone company serving five New Hampshire towns about Hillsboro, having affiliations with the Bell system.

PERLIE CHASE, well-known amateur skater, has announced his intention of trying for a berth on the crack Boston English High hockey team. Perlie is fleet, agile and fearless.

Beautiful white Eskimo dogs at Franklin Park Zoo attract general admiration. They were loaned the institution by DONALD B. MacMILLAN, the Arctic explorer, and it goes without saying the "huskies" find it a much more pleasant in their comfortable present quarters than they would "mushing" across the snow-covered tundra where they were born.

Few automobilists who motor through Hingham on their way to the South Shore and Nantasket Beach realize that the little gray-haired police chief on duty there was the originator of the "auto trap." Years ago CHIEF "WASH" JAMES, perched in a tree, took the number of the speeder and signalled another officer hidden in the woods a short distance away. That was the first trap in history, it is said.

Talk about "carrying coals to Newcastle"! The four-masted schooner Jere G. Shaw recently arrived at Portland, Maine, with a cargo of PINE lumber from Florida. Isn't it about time Maine stopped calling itself the PINE TREE State? We suggest substituting THE RECREATION State or THE NATION'S PLAYGROUND. Either would be more suitable, as it is many years since PINE lumber has been one of the big products of the State.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON INVENTORS

By Garrett P. Serviss

PROFESSOR FLORIAN CAJORI, lamenting the waste of mental effort involved in the simultaneous or successive invention of the same thing by different minds, recalls in Science the fact, which seems to have been generally overlooked in the encomiums bestowed upon the late Alexander Graham Bell, that Professor Bell was not the only person who accomplished the invention of the telephone.

"On the very day that Bell patented his telephone," Professor Cajori reminds us, "Elisha Gray applied for a patent for an instrument of similar kind. At an earlier date Philip Reis went a speaking machine to the Emperor of Russia."

Many will remember the litigation that resulted from the clash of inventors' claims, and ended by decisions of the courts which put a great fortune in Professor Bell's reach. With fortune went glory and reputation, while the other inventors got neither money nor fame.

The invention of the telegraph had a similar history. Morse got the credit, though he had to work hard for it, but Henry in this country and Gauss and Weber in Germany also invented the essentials of electric telegraphy. Such things are among the seemingly inevitable inequities of human association.

Two men, equally fit, start out in search of a gold mine. Both hit upon the same "lead," but one favored by accident, or circumstances, gets there a little ahead, and "stakes his claim," shutting the other out. Their former equality has now, through a single stroke of fortune, given place to a tragic inequality; yet human institutions have established no morally just way of dealing with such blind chances. On the contrary, the law, not because it seeks and prefers injustice, but because it is too coarse an instrument for work of that sort, not only lets the inequity stand but perpetuates it.

Professor Cajori is concerned only about the mental waste resulting from duplicate inventions. He thinks that some means should be sought whereby only one man, the first comer, shall expend "gray matter" upon an invention or discovery, thus avoiding repetition. A means of that kind, he suggests, would be offered by prompter publication of the results of new researches.

For this purpose, as supplementary to printing, he remarks that the radiophone might be employed to transmit instantaneously the late's scientific news from investigators to their co-workers all over the world. "And if that were done the largest part of the waste of mental effort could be avoided."

But, in cases where several men were simultaneously working at the same problem they would not be likely to communicate their preliminary or incomplete steps, and if they waited, as they probably would, to get the result in hand before sending out the news, nothing would be saved from the effort of their unknown competitors to attain the same goal.

Great inventions do not grow on every bush, and whoever gets the scent of one is likely to follow it up all the harder if he finds some one else is after his strawberries.

—Says Medbury—

A Lot of Unemployed Like to Know Where Work Is, So They Can Avoid It

While there are a lot of unemployed men here in the city, a good many of them wouldn't want a job if they could find one. However, they like to know where there is plenty of work, so they won't make a mistake and look in that vicinity.

They read the want ads every day trying to find a job for the fellow they're living off of. They don't want him to be out of work, because the last time he lost his job they went hungry.

Things got so bad that one of them almost had to go to work himself.

One guy looked all Summer for a job in Atlanta, Georgia, where he could work at his trade. The labor bureau asked him what he did and he said he was a snow shoveler.

He can't work at his trade in the Summer, and in the Winter he lays off.

But he's got his ambition back again and says that next June, July and August he's going to sell overcoats, ear muffs and umbrellas.

His idea of work is to be the iceman in an eskimo village.

Either that or a nurse to a hermit's children.

But they're not afraid of work; no, they are walk right down a street where they're a lot of "men wanted" signs hanging on the doors.

A lot of these unemployed men read the want ad section of the paper every day, see they don't get up till 10 or 11 in the morning and by that time the jobs are all gone.

To make sure all the jobs are gone, they only answer the advertisements in last week's papers.

Some of them are so shrewd that if they're in New York they read the classified section of a San Francisco daily.

Of course, the majority of the unemployed really want to work, but they don't have a chance to look in the want ads for a job, the lazy birds are always reading the papers.

A lot of them go out and get married and then borrow from so they'll have a place to write home for money.

Most of them haven't got a home but for two dollars and a gold-filled wedding ring they can establish one.

Still, after he's married, that makes two people he's got to hunt work for.

But that is just the reason so many men are looking for jobs today. A man's wife divorces him and then he has to get out and shift for himself.
